Who Can Kill This Army? Bad for Kansas and Maine. These Ladies Seem Fat. The Rockefeller Homestead.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

ARMY WORMS (cads), have you met them? They appear on your lawn newly sown, not thousands, but millions of them.

Traveling like an army, eating as they travel.

A learned scientist from the New Jersey agricultural department says you can get rid of them by sprinkling lime and arsenic on the grass, but that will kill birds. And birds of all kinds come in great numbers to eat the worms and you cannot deliberately poison them. Deer tracks show that you might also poison deer.

The expert says the worms will disappear after a little while, but that isn't enough comfort.

CANNOT CHEMISTS, perhaps those in the big oil company laboratories, discover something inexpensive that will kill army worms, without killing birds or deer?

Mr. Rockefeller's chemists created an insect and fly destroyer that does not harm children in the house. Why not an army worm destroyer that won't harm birds, or deer?

Those worms probably breathe through small holes in their sides, or in some such queer way. Cannot Mr. Teagle, Mr. Kingsbury, or the overshadowing Deterding produce a spray, applied under great pressure to the infested area, that would clog the worms' breathing apparatus, without injuring vegetation too much?

THE HUNTING of the modern "snark," which is the Eighteenth Amendment, proceeds along lines carefully planned. The chief snark hunters are Alfred E. Smith, John J. Raskob, Dwight W. Morrow, Federal Prosecutor Tuttle, Gov. Roosevelt, who will fight for the governorship this fall, and Dr. Butler, head of Columbia University.

THEY ARE AGREED on one thing that might disturb the ironbound prohibition states.

Each state would decide about prohibition within its borders, with the national government controlling transportation, keeping liquor out of states that do not want it.

This would mean concentration of bootlegging crime energies on prohibition states and freedom from bootlegging in so-called "liberal cities" like New York and Chicago.

If all the bootleggers of those two cities alone were concentrated on Kansas and Maine, heaven help Kansas and Maine.

STORIES OF STARVING or half-fed Russian workers are not confirmed by photographs of young Russian women, unloading heavy logs from boats in the Vologda region.

These powerful young Russian females, 16 to 25 years old, carry on their shoulders logs weighing 100 pounds and more, laughing as they work.

Their legs seem to be about 16 to 18 inches around the calf; their shoulders and hips are wide.

Young Russians are told that Russia belongs to them, whereas their fathers were told it belonged to the Czar and the nobles, and they, the peasants, were only cattle. That accounts for some of their cheerfulness.

The next generation, produced by young women of this log-carrying sort, will not consist of weaklings.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER lived on a 400-acre farm, on the edge of Cleveland. The city grew toward the farm; the Rockefellers moved away; the farm could have been sold at a great profit.

But profit now interests the Rockefellers as little as salt water interests a sailor.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has been, for the last four years, changing the old farm to a settlement of modern, inexpensive houses for smaller business men, executives and workers.

ON THE FARM now are four blocks of 81 private houses, designed by Andrew J. Thomas, who built the Metropolitan Life model dwellings for Mr. Ecker, and subsequently the model tenements in New York for Mr. Rockefeller. Several millions have been spent. The project completed, will cost $75,000,000.

Mr. Rockefeller adds to the value of his good example, by emphasizing the fact that it is common sense business, not charity. The houses are expected to earn interest on the investment, a fact that means nothing to the Rockefellers, father or son, but will interest others in similar, useful work.

When it can be shown that a thing can be made simultaneously useful AND profitable, many will follow the leader.

MR. ECKER produced admirable apartments, at rents extremely moderate; made them pay 8 per cent on the investmer of his policyholders, and has hundreds on the tenants' waiting list.

ALL THIS will awaken mixed emotions in the single tax bosom.

They think nobody should own land But if nobody owned it who would build wisely? Surely not grafting municipal governments. And can you

HOOVER, JR., IN SERIOUS CONDITION

President's Son Suffering From Lung Infection, White House Doctor Says

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Dr. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, said today a complete diagnosis of the illness of Herbert Hoover, Jr., had disclosed a small tubercular infection in his chest.

The diseased area is small, Capt. Boone said. Since the diagnosis has been made early, there is every reason to view the outcome of the President's son's illness optimistically.

RUN-DOWN CONDITION

The condition was held to be a result of the general run-down condition of the 28-year-old man.

The President's son was taken last week to the presidential lodge in Virginia and was believed to be suffering from an intestinal disorder.

Diagnosis was not completed, however, until this week.

Dr. Boone said early suspicions of a tubercular infection were confirmed.

He will stay at the mountain camp probably until frost comes and then will be brought to the White House for another complete examination. Further treatment will be decided at that time.

Dr. Boone said the patient had gained weight and was in much better condition after the one week of rest and regular diet.

PROGNOSIS CHEERFUL

If properly treated, the physician said he had every reason to believe full and complete recovery is likely, but it will take months of rest and diet.

In the meantime young Hoover has taken a leave of absence from his business connections as vice president of the Western Air Express.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr., today arrived from her home in Pasadena, Cal., and joined her husband at the presidential camp. Their three children were left in California.

President and Mrs. Hoover interrupted their week-end at the Presidential Lodge in Virginia to return to the capital last night and put their son Allan on the train for Harvard University, where he is to begin his senior year.

PHIPPS, STEEL PIONEER, DIES

Henry Phipps, 91, pioneer steel manufacturer and associate of Andrew Carnegie in making Pittsburgh the steel center of the world, died today at his Bonnie Brink estate at Great Neck, L. I., according to an Associated Press dispatch.

The Phipps millions, forged on the anvil of hard work in the pioneering days of iron, were given freely in philanthropies, in which Pittsburgh shared in memorials that have given pleasure and education to millions.

Barrymore's Wife Goes Under Knife

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Irene Fenwick, actress and the wife of Lionel Barrymore, has entered Roosevelt Hospital to undergo a minor operation. Hospital attaches said she would be a patient for only a few days. Once a prominent Broadway star, she has been seen less often on the stage since her marriage to Barrymore in 1923.

7 PLEAD GUILTY IN VOTE FRAUD

Seven members of the election board of the Seventh District, Third Ward, charged with conspiracy and wilful fraud, entered a plea of guilty of negligence after the trtial got under way today. Visiting Judge Miles I. Potter withheld sentence.

The defendants are Anthony Romano, judge; A. E. Antone and Ernest Sardamone, inspectors; Theodore Corry and J. R. Chisdo, clerks, and Salvatore Palermo and George Pomar, overseers.

They were charged with having defrauded Judge James B. Drew out of nearly 100 votes, and former Judge John A. Evans out of 50 votes at the primary election of September 17 last year.

J. Bryne Duer, of McKees Rocks, also is to face trial in Criminal Court today, charged with election law violations. The indictment alleges he took official ballots outside the voting room of the Eighth District of Stowe Township at the primary election September 20, 1927. He was not a member of the election board.

Sues Golfer for Failure To Yell 'Fore'

A damage suit based on the alleged failure of a golfer to observe the ethics of the ancient game, got under way in Common Pleas Court today.

Maurice Nernberg, handwriting expert, whose talents frequently figure in court cases, was sued by Leon H. Benjamin, of Rowan street, for injuries alleged to have been inflicted by Nernberg on the Schenley Park free links July 15, 1928.

Benjamin testified before Judge J. M. Swearingen that as he was set to putt on No. 6 green, Nernberg pulled a weird shot from No. 7 tee without the formality of yelling "Fore."

Benjamin said Nernberg's golf ball hit him in the mouth devastating five teeth and causing concussion of the brain. He seeks monetary damages for the teeth and other physical and mental suffering he says was the direct result of Nernberg's "wild shot."

Nernberg is being defended by Attorney Roy Dickey and the company carrying his golf insurance. Attorney O. K. Eaton represents Benjamin.

'RIDE' THREAT IN AUTO RING EXPOSURE

Man Whose Confession Led To Arrest of Supposed Chief Warned of Death

Threatened with death, Robert Coleman, 31, of Miami, Fla., whose alleged confession revealed operations of a big auto fraud ring in this city, was being held secretly under guard today until he could be spirited out of Pittsburgh.

Coleman informed Police Inspector James N. Hoey that after he had testified yesterday at a preliminary hearing in Oakland Police Court against Nathan Rogoff, 35, of 360 Cladissa street, he received a telephone call while in a hotel.

Coleman told Hoey the voice over the phone said:

"Get out of town within an hour or we will knock you off."

Hoey at once assigned Plainclothesman John Novak to guard Coleman, who was taken to another hotel until arrangements could be completed for taking him out of town.

Coleman, at the hearing before Magistrate J. J. O'Connor, explained that the ring operated with persons who had purchased machines on the payment plan, Hoey said. He named Rogoff as the leader of the ring.

Auto owners, behind in their payments, would consent to having their machine stolen by the ring, police charge, and the theft would be reported to insurance companies with which the car was insured. The gang would then resell the car, and the owner would collect the insurance, police charge.

Aside from beating insurance companies, Hoey said Coleman told him, the gang also guaranteed prospective auto buyers to get them high priced cars at reduced prices. Coleman, police said, would be ordered to go out and "lift" the required machine.

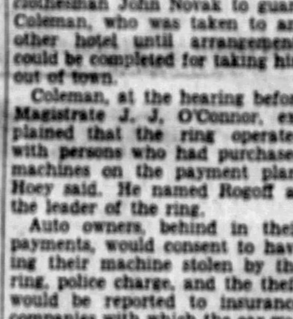
WHISKY TRAFFIC

As a side line, police said Coleman declared in his confession, the ring also engaged in whisky traffic, having used Coleman once as the driver of a booze truck.

Coleman said he was "put on the spot" because he was hijacked while bringing a shipment in, according to his alleged confession, but fled before the gang could get him.

While in hiding, Coleman told police, he escaped the gang by the very practice they had perfected. He was cornered in a poolroom in a small town when the gang drove up and left their machine parked outside.

When they came into the place, he said, he got out a window and escaped by stealing the ring's car.



Pilots in national reliability air tour were nabbed in Montana with 50 quarts of Canadian rum. It was a three-point landing. From Canada to the pilots to the revenue agents. Official weather man of the tour was fined ten bills for bringing in two quarts of the wrong climate.

It was what you might call a good-swill flight. The pilots brought in beer, whisky and sherry in the order named. But nobody can discover who gave the order. If that is what they call a reliability tour we will cancel the airplane and depend on hip pockets and fast motor boats, and no matter what this tour proves, it's a failure.

What England Needs

The following interview with William Randolph Hearst in reply to the question, "WHAT DO YOU, AS AN AMERICAN, THINK THAT ENGLAND NEEDS IN HER PRESENT SITUATION?" appeared under the above title in the September 20 issue of TIME AND TIDE, well-known English weekly publication:

I think England chiefly needs a little optimism. England always comes through its crises, and is always better off after each crisis than ever before. It is a mistake to say that England muddles through its difficulties. It does not muddle in the least. It gets through by means of British brains and British backbone, both of which are of the highest order, as everybody knows. Nevertheless, I think, if it is not an impertinence for an outlander to make a suggestion, that England does need to meet the present situation with several very definite lines of action.

First, I think that England must adopt a policy of regular and sustained reduction of taxation, and take whatever steps are necessary to make this policy possible. No country can prosper under permanent high taxation. High taxation, like any strain, can be endured for a while, provided a steady reduction brings an end in sight. Taxation is a bar to progress, a distinct burden on production. It is as much a handicap in competition as weight is a handicap in a race. The price of an article in the markets of the world is the actual cost of production, plus the taxation on production, plus again any and all taxation which tends to reduce profits below a "reasonable return." Neither capital nor labor will work except for a reasonable return, and that reasonable return must be taken out of the gross price of the article. Thus high taxation compels high prices, and no nation dragging the ball and chain of high taxation can compete favorably in industrial and commercial competition.

Second, England to restore prosperity must create wealth; and wealth is created by labor, not by idleness. It behooves England, therefore, to put all its people into productive labor and not maintain a large proportion of its man power in unproductive idleness. To maintain a large element of idleness is to encourage idleness and tax industry. It is not fair to the state, is not fair to the workers, and in the long run is not even fair to the idlers.

If conditions are such that a portion of the population must be maintained by the state, then that portion of the population should be engaged in contructive and productive labor for the state—perhaps in developing transportation facilities, or in experimenting with modern methods and machinery, or in perfecting the other elements which make general production cheaper and the creation of wealth easier.

Third, production is determined by the quantity of labor, the quality of labor, and the efficiency of modern machinery. If England puts all her people to work, she will have the requisite quantity of labor. If she educates and trains all her people adequately, she will have the requisite quality of labor. And if she is alert to introduce every new method and machine, she will have the requisite mechanical efficiency.

I have already said that I do not think England has her whole manpower at wealth-producing labor; and I will say, with due deference to those who may be better informed, that I do not think that mass education is what it should be in England. It is not what it is in Germany. It is not what it is in the more progressive parts of the United States; and it is not what it is in some of the dominions.

Of course, I know that higher education in England is the best in the world, but higher education is not as important in the progress of a nation as mass production. Mental perfection is brains plus education. Brains are pretty equally distributed throughout any nation, and if education is equally well distributed, the nation has the maximum of cultivated intelligence to draw upon, and possesses the maximum amount of individual and national mental and manual efficiency. Mechanical efficiency is merely a matter of keeping up with the times; and any intelligent and educated people can and will do that.

Fourth, in regard to the general political and economic aspect of the situation, I think that England is getting on the right road.

I believe in empire free trade, and empire protection. I mean that if I were an Englishman I would work and vote for these things, feeling assured that progress and prosperity for the empire and for its individual units lay in this direction.

What is the advantage of an empire if you have merely the expense of an empire and none of the benefits? What is the advantage of mere bigness if you have none of the benefits of unity and harmony and close co-operation?

The world is getting smaller every day. In transportation it is time that counts, not distance. In point of time, the various parts of the British empire are coming closer and closer together every day. One might say that the pressure of events is squeezing the water out of the British empire.

You are soon going to have a contiguous and homogeneous unit. Should it not be governed as such, remembering that in this unit the dominions are just as important as the mother country, and possibly more progressive?

A very capable Englishman once said to me:

"It's a mistake to bring the best young minds in the colonies to be educated in England. We should send the best young minds in England to be educated in the colonies. It would mean more for imperial progress."

Fifth, in foreign policy I think England's high ideal and inflexible purpose should be to secure for her great empire freedom from war and from all the evils and burdens of war.

BOBBY CUTS ONE STROKE FROM PAR

Noyes Second With 70 as Atlantan, Seeking Fourth Title, Gets Fine Start

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 22.—Bobby Jones set a mark for the rest of the field to shoot at today when he reeled off a 36-33—69 in the qualifying round of the national amateur golf championship, a title for which he would give his competitive life, since it would mean the winning of four major championships this year. Jones played today as though inspired, stringing together a sequence of nine straight pars, then adding a birdie and finishing up with six more pars, a buzzard and a birdie sprinkled in.

Only at the eleventh hole did the master touch of Jones falter. Here his drive left the fairway for the only time since the first hole and his mashie niblick from the rough failed to hold the green, a buzzard 5 being the result. Otherwise, the man was perfection. He, in fact, was putting for birdies on at least 16 of the 18 holes and the only other time that he seemed destined to exceed par saw him waft a 15-footer into the cup for a par at the fifteenth. CONGRESSIONAL ACTION TO STOP GRAIN SPECULATION LOOMS

HYDE SOVIET PLEA STIRS SENATE

Capital Awaits Disciplinary Action by Chicago's Exchange Against Brokers

By WILLIAM A. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The possibility that Congress may move to stamp out all speculation in grains loomed today as the Hoover administration awaited action by the Chicago Board of Trade on its charges that Soviet Russia has initiated a campaign to press American grain prices.

Leaders of the Senate farm bloc were incensed over the outspoken charges of Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde that a Soviet business corporation had executed a "short selling campaign" of 5,000,000 bushels of wheat to smash prices and breed discontent among American farmers. It was certain they would initiate senatorial action as soon as Congress reconvenes in December.

FISH INQUIRY

House leaders showing a like interest in the charges and the special "anti-red" committee, headed by Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr. (Rep.), of New York, will initiate a separate inquiry next week. Fish revealed he would send out committee investigators to learn the identity of the American brokers who handled the Russian account. He said he will summon the brokers to the witness stand to develop every angle of the Russian campaign.

SEEK SOVIET REASON

The Fish inquiry though will be undertaken, not to halt gambling on the grain exchanges, but to determine whether Soviet Russia is engaged in an anti-American industrial and commercial program in this country. His committee ultimately may recommend legislation to control Russian business activities in this country or at least to set up protective defenses against Russian commercial invasions. Within recent months, the Treasury Department barred Russian lumber imports but later rescinded the order. Some such move may be recommended by the House Committee.

The Hoover administration meanwhile was awaiting some disciplinary action by the Chicago Board of Trade against its broker-members who handled the Russian account. Secretary of Agriculture Hyde charged the brokers had handled selling orders for 5,000,000 bushels of wheat for future deliveries for the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, a subsidiary of the Soviet Amtorg Trading Corporation, a government organization. He said the Russians never intended to import wheat from Russia to fill these selling orders but hoped merely to smash down wheat prices in this country, later buying enough grain here at lower prices to fill the orders.

HAS WEAPON

The administration was interested in possible action by the board of trade. Hyde has already pointed out to John A. Bunnell, board president, that the law compels it to make such regulations as "provide for the prevention of manipulation of prices." He has told Bunnell that the Russian transactions were made solely to manipulate prices in defiance of the law.

If the Chicago authorities fail to take any action, the government undoubtedly will move. For one thing, Federal action might be initiated against the brokers, charging them with speculation in grain or with a conspiracy to depress prices in violation of the anti-trust laws. And if the situation developed an agricultural emergency, the exchanges themselves could be closed.

Chicago to Start 'Short Selling' Quiz

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—In response to charges made by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, the business conduct committee of the Chicago Board of Trade today undertook a "thorough" investigation of purported operations of Russian grain trading operations.

Joseph Badenoch, chairman of the business committee, announced his group would begin a careful inquiry regarding operations of the All-Russian Textile Syndicate of New York, an organization which has been identified as the Soviet agents allegedly responsible for the short selling of wheat.

BLUE LAW TEST IN BABY GOLF

WASHINGTON, Pa., Sept. 22.—A warrant charging violation of the state blue laws was to be sworn out here today by Police Chief Joseph Verderber against F. C. Robinson, operating the indoor Shady Brook Golf Course as a test case, he announced.

The action was to be the result of "polite refusal," according to Verderber, of Robinson to close Washington's first indoor miniature golf links less than 24 hours after its opening. The course opened Saturday and remained open yesterday despite the police request to cease operation.

Verderber said today he reported the incident to Mayor James McBurney and was told to notify Robinson that a warrant would be issued against him today.

ARNOLD, Pa., Sept. 22.—Members of the Arnold Independent football team were arrested here yesterday for attempting Sunday football on the Nineteenth street grounds. The order for their arrest was issued by Burgess John Hunter and executed by Fred Mathews, chief of police. Manager James Hess and Coach William Tannas stood sponsor for the appearance of those arrested at a hearing tonight.

Autoist 20, Killed In Chase by Police

DANVILLE, Pa., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—A youth tentatively identified as Sid Winston, 20, of Philadelphia, was killed when his automobile, which a state highway patrolman was pursuing, went over an embankment near Elysburg. Two of the other four men in the car were captured by the patrolman, and a posse later found the other two.

State Police reported the prisoners were Russell Tuckett, 18; John Schrefler, 20; John Jones, 18, and Francis Brust, all of Philadelphia.

Ex-Physician Dies At Beaver Falls

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Sept. 22.—George Graham Hart, 52, retired physician and former lieutenant in the United States Navy, died at his home here. Funeral services were to be held today. He was born in New York City. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Annie D. Hart; a son, George K., Jr. and a daughter, Bernice.

J. H. Devlin Hurt in Crash

Attorney J. Howard Devlin, member of the City Civil Service Commission, was painfully injured, and Senator Frank J. Harris, Luke Barnett, entertainer, and Charles McInerney, of the Redistricting Board, escaped hurts Saturday when Senator Harris' car was sideswiped by another machine near Mercer, Pa.

Devlin is in Mercy Hospital suffering a broken collar bone and a pelvis fracture. His condition was said to be satisfactory.

McInerney was driving. The party was en route to Conneaut Lake. After the accident Devlin was taken to a hospital in Meadville. He was brought to Mercy Hospital by train yesterday. Senator Harris accompanied him here.

The skies are clear and the ceiling unlimited over most of the country from the coast to the Mississippi River, as a result of a high pressure centered over the South Atlantic coast, and covering most of the eastern half of the country. Visibility ranges from four to eight miles, except at Chicago and Northern Indiana, where it is reduced to one mile by smoke. The wind ranges from eight to sixteen miles from Ohio eastward and calm over Northern Indiana and Illinois.

Good flying weather will continue tonight and Tuesday.

GIRL IN METAL LUNG IMPROVES

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—Still alive after 11 days of artificial breathing, Frances McGann, 25-year-old student nurse, today watched the battle to save her life as she lay within the aluminum walls of a "drinker respirator."

Her condition is improving, according to attending physicians who carefully regulate the alternating vacuum and pressure which force air in and out of the girl's lungs. She is a victim of paralysis of the chest.

The patient was allowed to interview her mother yesterday for the first time since she entered the respirator.

F. L. Mandel, Chicago Merchant Dies

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—Fred L. Mandel, pioneer Chicago merchant, and chairman of the board of Mandel Brothers, died in Paris after a brief illness. He was 60. News of the State street merchant's death reached here by cable to his family.

TRADE'S TREND UP, LAMONT REPORTS

Commodity Price Decline Has Reached Bottom, Says Secretary; Exports Gain

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Secretary of Commerce Lamont said today that all his reports indicated that "the business trend is distinctly upward." He declared:

"The various weekly reports are more or less mixed, but it is perfectly clear that business on the whole has ceased the decline, which was characteristic of earlier months this year, and there are now some distinctly encouraging features."

EXPORTS INCREASE

Among encouraging aspects, says Lamont, are the growth of export trade as revealed by August statistics, and the distinct picking up in retail business.

August exports' gains were greater than usual at this season, Lamont explained that during the years 1922-1929 the increase between July and August average 5½ per cent, while in 1930 it was more than 12½ per cent. This increase was not confined to one or two commodities, but was shared by most major groups.

COTTON, WHEAT GAIN

Lamont said cotton exports gained $13,000,000, and those of wheat $6,500,000.

There were important increases in exports in gasoline, motor trucks, passenger cars, electrical apparatus, tobacco, flour, crude petroleum and automobiles.

Preliminary figures on retail trade indicated improvements not only in department stores but other retail outlets.

Lamont said the gains were more than seasonal. Stocks of retail stores were exceptionally low, and Lamont expressed the opinion that purchases from manufacturers and wholesalers will increase.

The fact that large industries are buying raw materials was held to indicate that the bottom of the commodity price decline has about been reached.

Lamont declared the government has taken no steps to stimulate raw materials purchasing, adding that the developments are the normal reaction of industries in taking advantage of the price situation.

$400,000 Shortage Discovered in Bank

UTICA, N. Y., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—A shortage amounting to approximately $400,000 in the private bank of Tomaino Brothers, this city, was announced by Joseph A. Broderick, state superintendent of banks, today after several days of checking the bank's books. The president, Joseph Tomaino, was arrested on a technical charge of forgery, at the orders of the district attorney.

Unidentified Man Dead Beside Rails

The body of an unidentified man, aged about 55, was found along the Panhandle railroad tracks east of Thornburg Station, today by a railroad laborer. The man is believed to have been struck by a train last night. A $3 money order receipt issued in Philadelphia was found in his clothing, but nothing that would determine his identity.

grounds and community center at Scotland and Reedsdale streets, North Side, are among Mr. Phipps' notable gifts to the city.

Mr. Phipps was born in Philadelphia, September 27, 1839, the son of Henry and Hannah Phipps. The family removed to Old Allegheny when the future steel magnate was a boy and he was educated in the schools of that city. He was given the degree of doctor of laws by the University of Pennsylvania in 1913.

Leaving school at an early age, he sold newspapers and was a clerk in a jewelry store. Entering the plant of Dilworth and Bidwell, spike manufacturers, as an office boy, Phipps rose to the position of bookkeeper, which position he held from 1856 to 1861. In the latter year he became a partner in Phipps and Bidwell, agents for the DuPont Powder Company. He also was a partner in a small iron firm known as Kloman and Phipps.

CARNEGIE PARTNER

Shortly after this Mr. Phipps became associated with Andrew and Thomas M. Carnegie and built up the colossal fortune, much of which in later years was to be given for the god of humankind.

Among the philanthropies that shared in Mr. Phipps' generosity were the Phipps Institute, given to the University of Pennsylvania; psychiatric clinic at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore; a million dollars for sanitary tenements in New York, and many more millions for the fight against tuberculosis in Philadelphia and other cities.

In 1872 Mr. Phipps married Anne C. Shaffer, of Pittsburgh, who, with these children, survive him: Mrs. Frederick Guest and Mrs. Bradley Martin, and three sons, John S., Howard and Henry Carnegie Phipps.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Police Holding Son In Killing of Father

HAMMOND, Ind., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—John T. Prott, Jr., 27, was held today in connection with the death of his father, whose body was found yesterday at his home in Merrillville.

A shotgun lay beside the body and suicide was at first suspected by Sheriff Joseph B. Kyle.

ALL THE EXCITEMENT about short selling of wheat in our market by Russia turns out to be unnecessary.

Somebody, evidently, was seeking an excuse for falling prices.

Every day Chicago's Board of Trade, in the course of wheat speculation, buys and sells fifty to sixty million bushels of wheat.

In the course of nine months, Russian agents sold five million bushels as part of a "hedging" operation familiar to all board members. Such petty sales over a long period could not possibly affect prices.

A Russian representative observes, aptly:

"We buy two hundred and fifty million dollars worth of your goods and there is no investigation. We sell a few bushels of wheat and you investigate us."

MOVIE STUNT MAN KILLED IN LEAP

Kittanning Resident Dives To Death From New York Bridge, Thousands Watch

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—As several thousand motorists and pedestrians watched, Norman J. Terry, professional stunt man, of Kittanning, Pa., dove 213 feet Sunday from the span of the new Hudson River Bridge, paying for his daring with death.

It was believed to have been a publicity stunt staged by a movie concern.

Terry gained entrance to the closely guarded approach to the bridge in a manner not yet determined by police.

THOUSANDS WATCH

He was clad in a bathing suit, a pair of trousers and gymnasium shoes. He had fastened a tight corset around his body to protect his ribs and a wooden brace extended down his back. His legs and arms were wrapped in gauze that was fastened by adhesive tape.

Terry, who was 24, edged his way along the narrow catwalk that runs beside the cables, at a dizzy height above the water. He was observed by several thousand motorists and pedestrians on both sides of the river, who stopped to watch.

LEAPS TO DEATH

He stopped before he got to the middle of the span and stood poised for a moment on the wire cable.

Then he leaped into the river.

Terry's failure to strike the water head foremost is believed to have caused the fatality. He was dead when taken from the water.

PRISON GUARDS FOIL ESCAPE

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Col. Edward B. Stone, principal keeper of state prison, revealed today that plans for a general riot and outbreak at the prison during a ball game yesterday afternoon were frustrated by guards.

Fifteen hundred convicts were lined against a wall at an unannounced moment by armed guards, while other guards made a quick search.

Fifteen men were found with razors and knives, and some had coils of rope tied about their bodies, inside their clothing.

These men were placed in solitary confinement.

Knives and rope were found in sewer drain pipes in many parts of the prison.

After the search the men found without weapons were taken into the ball park, where the game was held as scheduled.

Convicts Cheer Governor's Foe

CANON CITY, Colo., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—A dispute between Gov. William H. Adams and the State Board of Corrections, control body for the State Penitentiary where 13 lives were lost in a riot a year ago, has been aired before the convicts. Charles J. Moynihan, of Montrose, board chairman, addressed several hundred prisoners yesterday, promising to take their case before the next Legislature. His address brought cheers from the convicts.

Railroad Employes Balk At Unloading Lion

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Julius, a 350-pound Nubian lion, was on his way to Manchester, N. H., today, safely confined in a heavily barred steel cage—thanks to Curator Daniel Harkins of the Franklin Park zoo.

Julius broke from his cage in the baggage car of a train from Buffalo, N. Y., last night, and roamed at will about the car from North Adams to Boston. Once at the North Station here he presented a serious problem to railroad officials.

The conductor in charge of the train wouldn't enter the car; the baggagemaster and railway expressmen refused even to attempt to unload its contents, and the Boston police looked yearningly towards the zoo for aid.

Harkins came to the rescue with a new cage, coaxed the lion in, and today Julius was on his way to his destination.

Coolidge Sees Greater Prosperity After Lull

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Sept. 22.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

It is no new thing to have temporary periods of economic readjustment to a new basis of production costs. While they are in progress business actively declines. When they have been completed, we have always started out from new foundations toward an era of greater prosperity.

Calvin Coolidge.

In the past 25 years our population increased about 50 per cent, and the wealth, income and productive capacity of the country increased about four-fold. The deposits in commercial and savings banks rose from about ten billions to about fifty-seven billions. Railroad business went from about two billions to about seven billions. Manufacturing started at about fifteen billions and reached about seventy billions. During this era we had several years of depression and the great war, but the country kept moving forward.

There are projects of nation-wide organization and development in transportation, communication, waterways, highways and electric lines awaiting for a little more confidence and stability. They will furnish employment for a large amount of our surplus labor and capital. A country that has been able to make such progress ought to look at temporary readjustment without undue discouragement. The permanent factors of future advance appear secure.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

MRS. M. W. VON BERNEY.....TALKING VIA RADIO

Mrs. Von Berney, 6417 Kentucky avenue, as she talked and heard her mother's voice from far-off Australia for the first time in six years. She talked over KDKA's short wave connections.

HEARS MOTHER IN ANTIPODES

Tears of joy were shed by Mrs. M. W. von Berney of 6417 Kentucky avenue, East End, when she heard her mother's voice for the first time in six years during a two-way radio broadcast today between Pittsburgh and Australia.

The family reunion was made possible by Westinghouse Radio Station KDKA and Station VK2ME of Sidney. Mrs. von Berney not alone spoke to her mother, Mrs. M. R. Williamson, of Mansman, a Sidney suburb, but also heard her sister, Mrs. Vera Timms, and a niece, Dorothea Timms, 10. Mr. von Berney joined in the broadcast and conversed with his mother-in-law for the first time in 18 years.

The broadcast was declared one of the most successful of the weekly transmissions, according to P. A. Boyd, of KDKA, who made tests for the international broadcast next Monday at the opening of the safety congress.

PLEAS FOR SON, SHOT DEAD

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—A father of eight children, who remonstrated with police over the arrest of his son, is dead today and two policemen accused of the shooting are held on a charge of homicide as a result of two boys kicking a football on the streets of Chestnut Hill yesterday.

The dead man, Felix Stranges, 46, was shot down when he rushed out of his home to protest against the arrest of his son, Anthony, 18, the youth and neighbors charged.

The accused officers, William Hollywood Mueller, charge the elder Stanges was shot when he attempted to pull a revolver.

Plan Dragging Maine Lake for Missing Justice Crater

QUESTION WIFE, SERVANTS AT RESORT HOME

Grand Jury to Be Called If Stories Fail to Meet Expectations of Officers

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Because of a suspicion of foul play, a grand jury inquiry and the dragging of lakes for the body of Justice Joseps Force Crater, of New York, were under consideration today by state authorities.

Action in Kennebec County, where the Craters have a summer home at Belgrade Lakes, was inspired by a letter to County Attorney Frank E. Southard from District Attorney Crain, of New York, saying that "some of Justice Crater's associates think he has been the victim of foul play—possibly in your jurisdiction."

MISSING WEEK

Justice Crater has been missing since August 6. Many of his friends have expressed the belief that he was killed for the $5,150 which he drew from the bank the day he disappeared, but the assumption was that if he met foul play it was near New York, where he was last seen in the Broadway theatrical district.

Capt. Joseph F. Young, Jr., deputy chief of the State Highway Police, arranged to question Mrs. Stella Crater, wife of the missing jurist, and two servants today. Southard said he also planned to question them tomorrow. If their answers were unsatisfactory Southard said they probably would be taken before the grand jury next week. Southard added that he might have Crater's summer home searched.

Mrs. Crater has refused to appear before New York jury. District Attorney Crain said her answers to a questionnaire sent to her had been "unsatisfactory."

PLEAD NOT GUILTY

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader, and Thomas T. Tommaney pleaded not guilty today to an indictment charging them with offering to procure an appointment to public office for a consideration, and were held for trial in $2,500 bail each.

The two were indicted Friday by a special grand jury, which also returned indictments against Mr. and Mrs. George F. Ewald, after an inquiry into charges that Mrs. Ewald paid to Healy, through Tommaney, $10,000 in connection with the appointment of Ewald to the City Magistrates' bench in 1927.

Indian Police Quell Riot, 4 Natives Killed

NAGPUR, India, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Four hill tribesmen were reported killed and 50 wounded by police suppressing a riot in Bordhia Village, Bejuld District.

Several hundred tribesmen attacked the police with bamboo sticks and stones in an attempt to rescue some of their fellows from custody. The police, hard pressed, opened fire on the mob.

Bituminous Coal Output Increases

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Total production of soft coal during the week ended September 13, including lignite and coal coke at the mines, is estimated at 9,150,000 net tons, an increase of 1,062,000 tons over the preceding week and 11,008,000 tons in the 1929 period.

JAIL DEMANDED FOR THOMPSON

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 22.—Demand for the immediate imprisonment of J. V. Thompson for contempt of court in failing to meet obligations to the Princess of Thurn and Taxis in the estate of John Nicolls, her father, was made today before Judge J. W. Dawson, of the Orphans' Court by ex-Judge Prather, formerly of Crawford County. Judge Prather succeeded Frederick W. Miller as chief counsel for the princess.

The princess was present at the hearing. She has recovered from an attack of neuritis which confined her to her apartment in New York.

A surprise was sprung by Attorney H. S. Dumbauld, who represented the heirs of Emma Messmore. He said that so far as the contempt proceedings concerned the Messmore estate, he would ask the court to dismiss them. It was indicated that a settlement was pending.

Scientist Tells Of Control by Mind

That man, with the help of Christ, can govern his body with his mind was the message of Dr. John M. Tutt's lecture on Christian Science in the Nixon Theater yesterday afternoon. When aided by Christ, he preached, there are no limitations to the power of man's mind. Dr. Tutt is a member of the Board of Lectureship, First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass.

Hoover Message Lauds Jews at New Year

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—A message from President Hoover to American Jews on the eve of their celebration of Rosh Hashanah (New Year), which begins tonight, was made public today by the Jewish Tribune, a weekly periodical.

The Jewish race has made numberless contributions to the progress of humanity, President Hoover said, "but none so precious as their contribution to the spiritual life of mankind."

Similar messages were received from Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

ROSH HASHANA BEGINS TODAY

Jewish New Year will be observed beginning tonight with the sounding of the Shofar, the ram's horn of ancient Jewish tradition, ushering in the year of 5691.

The ceremony will be observed by Jews throughout the world and is known as Rosh Hashana. In the Hebrew religion, it is the anniversary of the creation of the world. Blowing of the Shofar is a reminder of the time for man's renewal of his obligations to his fellow man and of his duty to God.

In the early times, the festival was observed by offering special sacrifices at the temple in Jerusalem. When the temple was destroyed and Jews dispersed over the world, a new significanse arrived and Rosh Hashana came to be a day of self-examination of personal actions and deeds in the year that had passed.

Gem Seller Robbed Of $30,000 Rings

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Louis Rothstein, 38, jewelry salesman and treasurer of the firm of Rothstein Brothers, Inc., of Seattle and New York, reported to police he was robbed of between $30,000 and $40,000 in mounted diamonds at a railway station.

The robbery was executed by two men, who demanded he give them his bag containing the diamonds. More than a score of persons saw the holdup. The robbers escaped in an automobile.

Latins Best U. S. Sewing Machine Customers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Women of Spanish blood apparently are making much of their clothing at home on sewing machines.

The United States customs record on foreign trade in the human-powered sewing machines shows Latin-American countries are the big customers.

Last month Mexico took one-third of all United States export of hand or foot-operated sewing machines; the Philippine Islands accounted for the next largest total, of 2,402 machines; Chile was put down for 643; Ecuador for 331.

Canada took but 904 sewing machines.

INCREASE IN U.S. TAX FORECAST

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—With data now available indicating to a practical certainty the volume of government receipts up to the first of January—before which time Secretary Mellon must recommend to Congress as to the continuation of the one per cent tax reduction—it appeared today that such a cut could not be approved without a decided upset in fiscal policies.

Notwithstanding the fact that the administration through statements from the White House and Secretary Mellon virtually stand committed to a continuation of the one per cent lower tax on corporations and individual normal incomes, it is now recognized that conditions in November and December may necessitate a change in this attitude.

King's Yacht Race Denied in London

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—A Buckingham palace official refuted today a story published in London and New York that King George intended inaugurating a "free-for-all" yacht race open to all comers at Cowes next year, offering a cup as the trophy.

CHURCH QUIZ VEILED IN SECRECY

Mystery Surrounds Nature Of Accusations; Return From Tour Is Unexpected

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, today was en route from Santos to New York aboard the steamer American Legion, after cutting short by two months a visit and business trip to Brazil.

The bishop and his bride, his former secretary, sailed secretly from Santos Tuesday. They will arrive in New York at the outset of the autumn Congressional political campaigns.

The bishop's friends would make no comment today upon his departure.

When interviewed upon his arrival in Brazil, August 18, the bishop said his work in Brazil would prevent his taking part in the autumn political campaign, and that he would not be a factor in the pre-election movements.

SECRECY MAINTAINED

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, chairman of the college of bishops, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, said today he had received charges filed against Bishop James Cannon, Jr., but declined to reveal their nature.

Bishop Ainsworth said the communication from Dr. C. J. Harrell, of Richmond, Va., who, with three other traveling elders of the church, have filed new complaints against Bishop Cannon, chairman of the church committee on temperance and social service, was "official," and would not be given out. A statement said:

"I have received the communication referred to by the Rev. Dr. C. J. Harrell, of Richmond, Va., in recent press dispatches. It is an official communication and will not be given to the public by me.

"I have nothing more to say."

Bishop Ainsworth said he did not know when or where the committee that will investigate the charges would meet.

Under church rules, Bishop Ainsworth must call a meeting of a committee of 12 to conduct an investigation of the complaints.

CHARGES MYSTERY

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.—(Universal.)—Southern church circles were stirred today by the new charges brought against Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Virginia.

While the general nature of the indictment drawn up by four traveling elders of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and forwarded to Bishop William H. Ainsworth, of Birmingham, Ala., Saturday, are reported based on personal conduct, stock speculations and political activities, their specific nature remains yet undisclosed.

Mexican Catholics Told to Avoid Strife

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—The Apostolic delegate, the Most Rev. Archbishop Leopold Ruiz y Flores, in a public statement today urged the Catholics of Mexico to pay no attention to criticisms of the religious settlement made between the Vatican state and the Mexican government 14 months ago.

The archbishop said that from the day the Pope agreed to the terms of the settlement it became outside the province of any Catholic bishop or priest to criticize publicly the terms of that agreement.

Greentree Church Dedication Sunday

Dedication ceremonies will be held next Sunday for the new Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church, Greentree road and Potomac avenue, Greentree. The dedicatory address will be delivered by the Rev. Guy D. Wallace, of Braddock, a son of the late Dr. J. M. Wallace, in whose memory the church was named. The Rev. J. Paul Graham is pastor of the church.

Wales, Incognito, Sees Sights in Paris

Universal Service.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Hailing the Prince of Wales as "Prince David, the worthy grandson of Edward VII," who was a traditional figure of the Parisian life, of other years, the Paris Soir devotes a long article to describing the first 24 hours of an incognito stay in the capital it says is being made by Edward, Price of Wales.

The article is headed:

"How the Prince of Wales, appreciates Paris life," and begins with a scene at a cocktail bar, "where the barman is Scotch, the proprietor Spanish, the Prince English, the customers French, and the bar, itself, quite naturally American."

After this visit, the Prince is said to have taken a short walk on the boulevards, then motoring away in his "black palatial limousine along the Champs Elysees." At this point, the Paris Soir "respecting the freedom of his Royal Highness and his incognito," states he returned to his hotel at 5 o'clock in the morning and slept until 11 o'clock. Then he breakfasted on bacon and eggs, cold cuts and a pint of ale.

The remainder of the day until tea time—which included a poached egg on toast—was spent golfing.

The Prince is slated to depart Tuesday for Southern France.

Pilots Hail Luke, War Ace, As Greatest U. S. Flier

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—The American Society for Promotion of Aviation has revealed a consensus of pilots who were asked to answer the question: "Who is America's greatest air hero?" The question was asked in discussion with a group of pilots at the society headquarters. Here is the result:

Second Lieut. Frank Luke, of Phoenix, Ariz., known as the "balloon buster," who lost his life over the lines in 1918, was unanimously accredited America's greatest hero.

Maj. James Doolittle was the group's second choice as America's outstanding airman from a point of combined flying and engineering knowledge.

Bert Acosta, bad boy of aviation, was said to be the peer of any flying man in the world when he could be encouraged to take his profession seriously.

Miss Elinor Smith, of Freeport, N. Y., was rated best woman pilot in the world and Capt. Eddie Brooks, Denver, Col., with a 13-year flying record without a mishap, was selected the country's safest pilot.

ONE MAN DEAD IN CRIME WAVE OVER WEEK-END

Six Bandit Suspects Held After Scores of Holdups, Robberies; Stores Looted

One man was dead today and scores of holdups and robberies were reported as police attempted to end a crime wave over the week-end. Six bandit suspects were arrested.

City detectives and Mt. Washington police had arrested four suspects in connection with the killing of a Mt. Washington service station attendant, but refused to release public the prisoners' names, as police investigation is expected.

Charles Hammond, 26, of 119 Almond way, the dead man, was killed by one of the bandits who entered the Liberty Be Service Station, Boggs and Washington avenues, and escaped with $186, police said.

NO WARNING

Hammond was killed without warning, according to Herman Holmes, of 20 Wells street, who with Hammond was employed at the station.

Two other suspects, Michael Arrisher, 27, alias Tommy Brown, of 1446 Handlan street, and James Poole, alias Pershing Davis, of First street, Braddock, were arrested in connection with the theft of $732 from two victims who were forced to disrobe.

Detectives Edward McEntire and Clarence Ramer, who made the arrests, said the men held up Simon Abbetta, of 306 Arch street, and M. Katz, of 2221 Spring street, and took their money after forcing them to take off their clothing.

SAFE CRACKERS FOILED

An attempt to blow a safe in a butcher shop, house robberies and thefts from automobiles were reported while detectives were busy with investigations of robberies which occurred Saturday night, police said.

Last night's robberies included the attempt of two yeggs to blow up the safe of M. H. Hambacher, who has a butcher shop at 1905 Murray avenue. Hambacher told police that when he went to his store he saw two men run out a rear door. He found the combination dial knocked off the safe and a fuse set to blow the door off.

TRUNK TAKEN FROM AUTO

Lyle Dell, of 537 Fifth avenue, reported the theft of a trunk and clothing valued at $400 from his machine in Schenley Park.

Mitchell C. Jessem, of Hotel William Penn, reported to police that his machine was looted in William Penn way of a suitcase containing clothing valued at $225 and valued papers.

HIGHWAYMEN SOUGHT

Police of Allegheny Valley towns were searching for two masked bandits who held up four motoring couples near Boyd School, Bakerstown road, two miles west of Tarentum. The loot comprised cash, jewelry, license plates and owners' and drivers' cards, according to Tarentum police.

The holdup men stole several valuable rings from Mrs. Roy Jenkins, of Tarentum, and took her husband's watch, valued at $60, Jenkins told police.

Mifflin Township police were investigating the ransacking of the home of Fred Smith, of Miller avenue, Homestead Park, which was entered while the family was away, police were informed. The burglars got $25, Smith said.

WHISKY THIEVES BALKED

Whisky thieves who had prepared to steal four cases of liquor from a Mayflower Drug Company store, at Baum boulevard and Euclid avenue, were frustrated when Patrolman Lawrence Caldwell approached the store just after they had unlocked the front door.

While the family of Walter G. Hayes, of 5100 Bayard street, was away, thieves ransacked the home and took a small bank containing $35, a revolver, cuff links, a watch, two rings and a coat, all valued at $205. Entrance was gained by using a pass key, police were told.

Forcing a rear window of the Three-M Service Station at 334 North Braddock avenue, thieves escaped with $38.51.

STORES ROBBED

Ten dollars was taken from the store of John Blackencie, 1203 Troy Hill road, by robbers who forced a rear window.

Thieves gained entrance to the confectionery store of Irene Diamond, 914 North Lang avenue, and took tobacco valued at $8.

A. Cann, of 5478 Black street, reported that sneak thieves entered his home and stole $65 from his trousers pocket.

Two suitcases containing clothing valued at $135 were stolen from an automobile owned by Anthony Ippifch, of Newark, while it was parked in the rear of the Mayfair Hotel, police said.

WOMAN VICTIM OF AMNESIA

A young woman, 26, apparently suffering from amnesia, was being cared for by the matron in North Side Police Station today.

Shabbily dressed and with one foot crippled, the girl appeared this morning at the home of Mrs. A. C. McCarroll, 129 Marshall avenue. Her answers to questions were incoherent. Mrs. McCarroll fed and clothed the girl and took her to the police station.

She could not tell her name or place of residence. Redness on one cheek was said by police to resemble a burn or birthmark.

Dr. A. F. P. Huston, city physician, who examined the woman, said she might be suffering from lack of nourishment. He said she would be held in the matron's department for observation.

W. H. Stevenson, Civic Leader, Merchant, Dead Here at 77

time gave the final directions for the marking of the old Forbes road from Bedford to Pittsburg.

IN FATHER'S BUSINESS

Having accomplished the achievement of these enterprises, he returned to his home and since had been confined to his room, sinking rapidly until the end.

Mr. Stevenson was born in Pittsburgh January 19, 1853, a son of George K. Stevenson, a pioneer merchant, and Mary Dickson Brown Stevenson. Upon completion of a course in the city high schools he became associated with his father in business and for years was president of the George K. Stevenson Company.

WAS COUNCILMAN

From his earliest life he took an active interest in municipal affairs and served in Pittsburgh Council from 1902 till 1909. He was a vigorous foe of factional politics and in 1909 as a leader of the independent groups made a canvass as a candidate for mayor which became memorable in the city's political history.

His defeat by a close margin awakened a movement for reform in politics and was followed by the institution of the new city charter based on a modification of the commission form of government in a small non-partisan council.

By this time Mr. Stevenson had become a leader in many civic activities and retired from active politics.

CALLED BY CARNEGIE

He was one of the men summoned by Andrew Carnegie in his council for the establishment of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and served on the board from 1902 till 1909. Mr. Stevenson was instrumental in the selection of the present site of the school facing the broad campus in Schenley Park and was the constant advisor of Mr. Carnegie in his extension of his philanthropies for Pittsburgh.

A member of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission since its founding in 1904, Mr. Stevenson had been treasurer of the board since the death of Judge J. H. Reed.

Mr. Stevenson was a member of the board of directors of the Pittsburg Chamber of Commerce from 1903 until his death, and as president of that organization in 1913-15 was a leading influence in building its membership.

PROMINENT IN RIVER WORK

In his work for inland navigation development, Mr. Stevenson was known internationally. He had been chairman of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board since 1915, and under his direction the surveys were made for the construction of a canal from the Ohio River to the Great Lakes, including improvements of the rivers, the impounding of waters in flood control, and the commercial extension of the surrounding territory.

He was active in the National Waterways Congress, and was a member of the Mississippi Valley Waterways Association, the Inland Waterways Association, the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association and other organizations devoted to navigation interests.

One of his last works was in devising plans for President Hoover's mammoth waterways projects.

HISTORICAL LEADER

In 1908 he was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of the celebration of Pittsburgh's sesqui-centennial and a few years later reorganized the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania and was its president until his death.

He was instrumental in raising the fund for the erection of Historical Hall in 1913 and continued his efforts which will result in the completion of a magnificent structure.

He was interested in legislation establishing the Pennsylvania Historical Commission and long had served on that body, being its chairman from 1919 to 1923, and last year again became chairman, succeeding Col. Henry W. Shoemaker, now minister to Bulgaria.

LEAVES A SON

He was a member of the executive committee of the Pittsburgh Food Commission and director of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, the Pittsburgh Free Dispensary, the Allegheny Cemetery and the Polar Water Company. He was an active member of the Duquesne Club.

He married Miss Frances Large, member of a pioneer Pittsburgh family, who survives him with one son, William H. Stevenson, Jr., and five grandchildren. Mr. Stevenson was active in the work of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church. During the World War he was chairman of the Allegheny County Division, Council of National Defense.

EATON FINISHES MERGER STORY

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Sept. 22.—(INS)—After a surprisingly brief cross-examination during which his credibility in opposing the merger of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with Bethlehem Steel Corporation was tested, Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, was released from the witness stand in the Common Pleas Court trial here today of the injunction suit against the consolidation.

Eaton was questioned by Newton D. Baker, chief counsel for the defense, who sought to prove that the millionaire witness did not follow the same procedure in engineering steel mergers of his own that he claims should have been followed in effecting the merger of the Youngstown concern with Bethlehem.

The Cleveland financier was followed to the witness stand by W. B. Campbell, of New York, who was cross-examined by Clan Crawford, anti-merger attorney, regarding details of bookkeeping and accounting methods of both Sheet and Tube and Bethlehem.

KIWANIANS OPEN ANNUAL MEET

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Five hundred delegates and visitors were here today to attend the annual convention of the Kiwanis Clubs of Pennsylvania which got under way this morning with business sessions being held in Hotel Lawrence.

Mayor Joseph C. Williams welcomed the delegates.

Paul A. Siple, Erie Boy Scout who accompanied the Byrd expedition to the Antarctic, and Raymond M. Crossman, of Omaha, Neb., president of Kiwanis International, were among the speakers.

Warden Lawes, of Sing Sing prison, was the featured speaker on the afternoon program.

BISHOP LEONARD DIES AT 84

GAMBIER, O., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—The death of Bishop William A. Leonard, of the diocese of Ohio, has deprived the Protestant Episcopal Church of one of its most noted leaders.

Bishop Leonard, who had presided over the Ohio diocese for 42 years, died at his summer home here yesterday of heart trouble and the infirmities of old age. He was 82. Burial will be made in Cleveland Thursday.

His death had been expected since Friday night.

He had been ill since last June, when he was stricken while preparing to leave for Mt. Vernon to consecrate a class.

Mrs. Leonard died 15 years ago. There were no children.

Bishop Leonard was the oldest active bishop in the church, both in age and in point of service, and twice was titular head of the church.

The Rt. Rev. Warren L. Rogers, of Cleveland, automatically became bishop of the diocese of Ohio.

What England Needs

England being in the very vanguard of Christian civilization, should make no alliances contemplating war, but only those which will insure peace. The ancient fetish of a European balance of power is not a principle to insure peace, but to make war positive and imperative. War is made certain by a balance of power which leaves the issue uncertain and open to decision only by experiment. Peace is secured by an UNbalance of power—a preponderance of power which renders a nation or a combination safe from aggression.

I believe world preponderance of power can be secured through a commission of English speaking peoples to establish peace for all time among themselves and to promote peace throughout the world. England has almost as little actual concern with the suicidal conflicts of the continent of Europe as America has. At any rate, her best interest, like our best interest, is to keep out of them. Thus the basis of a co-operative agreement between the United States and the British empire is laid in common interest and mutual benefit.

I believe a new era of higher civilization for all mankind will dawn when England and America cut loose from the squalid cat-fights of Europe and join hands to secure peace, progress and prosperity throughout the world.

Greek Apologizes For Slap at Cuba

GENEVA, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Nicholas Politis, Greek foreign minister, today made public amends to Cuba for the resentment he aroused last week by publicly criticizing Cuban opposition to immediately enforcing the protocol for revision of the World Court statute.

Dr. Orestes Ferrara, Cuban chief delegate, who had drawn Politis' fire, and who had retaliated in the assembly, acknowledged the Greek stateman's apology and expressed his appreciation for the "noble speech."

Rock Fall Entombs Miners, 1 Killed

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—One miner was found alive and another dead in the Royal mine of W. J. Rainey, Inc., last night, where they had been entombed by a rock fall for 16½ hours.

The man found alive is George Herbert, 51, Vanderbilt. He was taken to Uniontown Hospital. John Everly, 36, was found dead.

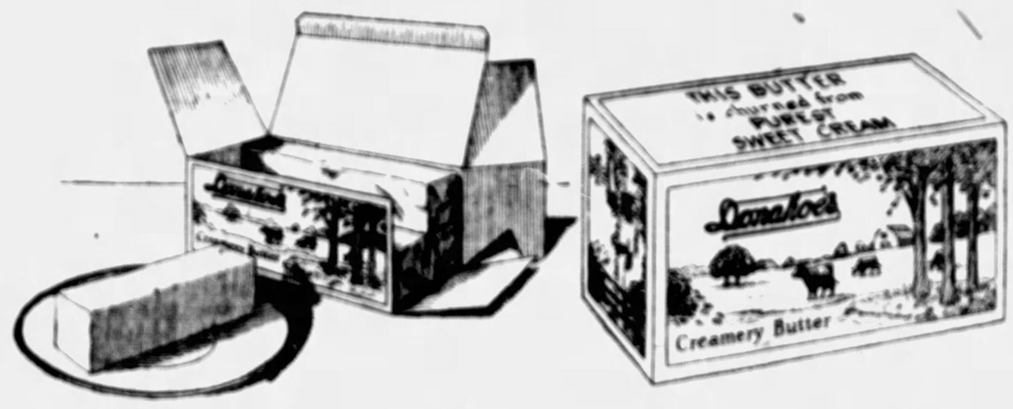
Definition of Butter--

"Butter is essentially an emulsion of water in solidified milk fat, brought about by the churning of milk or cream. It also contains small amounts of non-fatty constituents of milk, such as milk proteins, milk sugar, milk ash and lactic acid. It may contain added salt and coloring substance.

The fundamental principle involved in making butter is to subject the milk or cream to such treatment as to cause the minute fat globules to unite, forming butter granules."

Definition of Donahoe's Butter

"—the BEST in Pittsburgh!"



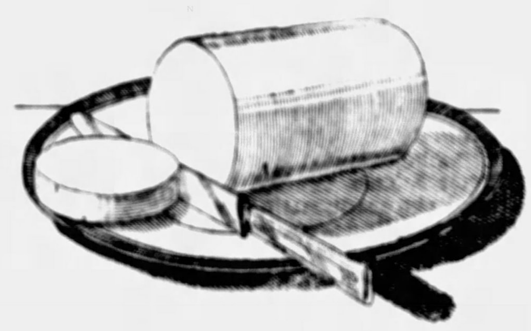
the quarter-pound bars

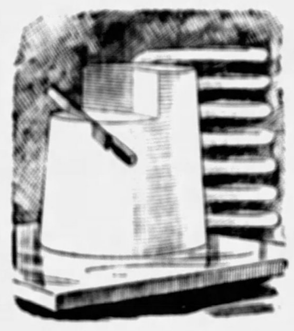
—four in a carton—individually wrapped in parchment—the ultra modern butter package; easily and quickly the bars can be cut into neat cubes for table service.

the pound print...

—machine cut; wrapped in parchment—the butter to choose when you are obliged to take it a great distance. Convenient and easy to serve.

Both quarter-pound bars and pound prints are packed in attractive paraffined cartons—thus protecting them against various agencies of deterioration after they reach the consumer, such as light, air, rapid changes in temperature and the diverse vegetable or other off-flavors that butter is quick to absorb from foods kept in close proximity to it in the household refrigerator.





the country roll...

—cut, or rather squeezed from tubs, by a wonderful new butter-cutting machine with hollow, revolving spiral rolls—automatically wrapped in a double wrapper of parchment paper.

The process of squeezing the rolls from the tub makes the roll butter have an exceptional smoothness of texture—roll butter is easy to slice, easy to spread, and as there are no small pieces, there is no waste. One and two-pound rolls.

the good old tub...

—as we've sold butter these many years—all too long as we see it now. Packed for DONAHOE'S in brand new, clean ash wood tubs — with parchment paper all around the butter inside the tub.

Many fond recollections are linked up with this old-time way of selling butter. We'll always continue to sell tub butter "for old time's sake."

JEWELRY FIRM FOUNDER DIES

Funeral services were to be held this afternoon for Morris Kingsbacher, 82, one of the founders of the jewelry firm of Kingsbacher Brothers more than 50 years ago, who died in his home at 3025 Marlboro street, Saturday night.

Honorary pallbearers will be Abraham Arnfeld, Robert Blaustein, Henry Plaut, Isaac W. Frank, Marcus Frankman, Horace Oakley, Emanuel Grafner, S. F. Goldsmith, Raymond M. Kaufman, Irvin F. Lehman, Homer Morgan, Dr. L. Ohlman, Harry Sachs, J. A. Schad, Hugo Sloss, Sr., A. C. Speyer, S. A. Stein, Dr. Edwin Zugsmith and Dr. Robert Zugsmith.

Mr. Kingsbacher, despite his advanced age, had been actively engaged in the management of the jewelry firm until a few weeks ago. He was born in Thalheim, Germany, and came to this country at the age of 18. In 1877 he came to Pittsburgh and in 1883 married Sophie Friedenthal, of New York.

He was active in Jewish social, religious and philanthropic affairs. He was a former president of the Concordia Club.

He also was a member of the governing board of the Westmoreland Country Club and at one time was active in the affairs of the Congregation of Rodef Shalom.

Mr. Kingsbacher leaves his wife, a brother, Aaron, three sisters, Mrs. Carrie Mannheimer and Miss Zeltha Kingsbacher, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Sophie Frank, who lives in Germany; a son, Alvin, of Los Angeles, and three daughters, Mrs. Ernest W. Stix, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Elias Sunstein and Mrs. William K. Frank, of Pittsburgh.

DOCTORS GOING TO HARRISBURG

Many Pittsburgh district physicians are planning to attend the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania State Homeopathic Medical Society, to be held next Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the Penn-Harris Hotel in Harrisburg. Among the more important papers to be read and discussed will be those on illness in industry, spinal anaesthesia and advances that have been made in the treatment of tuberculosis.

Included in the reports will be those of Dr. Margaret Hassler, of Reading, president of the society, and Dr. Anna Johnston, Pittsburgh, treasurer. Dr. Henry I. Klopp, superintendent of the state hospital for the insane at Allentown, will be one of the principal speakers.

Mayor George E. Hoveter of Harrisburg will welcome the doctors.

Court at Erie Moves Into Garage

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 22 (AP)—Erie County's Criminal Court moved into a garage Saturday, when jurors, defense and prosecution attorneys, accompanied by Nick Carlucci, first of a trio of Conneaut, O., alleged gangsters, on trial for murdering Tony Ruberto, visited the place, here where jurors inspected a small delivery truck in which Carlucci and his two companions are alleged to have driven to the lonely spot on the Knoblish road where Ruberto was slain the night of August 7.

Roadhouse Bombed In Fight of Gangs

EASTON, Pa., Sept. 22 (INS.)—Three men in a speeding car bombed the Plaza Hotel at Belfast, near here, early today, wrecking the front porch and shattering every window. No one was injured.

The explosion climaxed a series of bombings which police ascribed to a feud between rival gangs of roadhouse proprietors.

AUTO GUNMEN HUNTED

East Boroughs police today were endeavoring to find the four men who sped through Wilkinsburgh and Edgewood in an automobile early yesterday, escaping bullets of two policemen.

Police found the car in East End avenue and expressed the belief it was used by one of the gangs which took part in the week-end crime wave in the Pittsburgh district.

Patrolman Bliss Zeiser tried to stop the car after it was driven the wrong way in a one-way street, but the driver sped on, turning into a side street when Zeiser fired his revolver.

Description of the car was broadcast and later it was seen in Greendale avenue, Edgewood, by Patrolman Daniel Rice.

Rice stepped into the street, motioning for the driver to stop, but instead the car was swerved toward him. Leaping aside, he fired five bullets at the disappearing car. He found the car abandoned four blocks away, he said.

Wisconsin Forest Fires Under Control

WISCONSIN RAPIDS, Wis., Sept. 22 (AP)—Fires that flared over barren marsh and cutover lands in five counties and fouged Central and Southern Wisconsin and parts of Northern Illinois with smoke, are under control today.

One man was burned seriously, outbuildings on six farms, a schoolhouse and a cottage were destroyed during the three-day reign of the flames.

Doyle Funeral.

Funeral services for James F. Doyle, 60, who died at his home, 3413 Terrace street, Saturday, will be held Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock with a solemn high mass at St. Paul's Cathedral. Born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Mr. Doyle spent most of his life in the Pittsburgh district. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Anna Jane Doyle; three sons, Charles F., James F. and Raymond J. Doyle, all of Pittsburgh; a daughter, Mrs. Rose Myers, of Homestead Park, and a brother, Charles J. Doyle, of Pittsburgh.

Eleanora Lippman.

Funeral services for the late Eleanora Lippman, 42, will be held from the residence of her brother, Herman Lippman, 2627 Brighton road, at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Interment is to be in St. John's Lutheran Cemetery. Miss Lippman died Saturday night after an illness lasting nine years. Besides her brother Herman, she leaves one other brother, Albert G. Lippman, of San Diego, Cal., and a sister, Mrs. Freda Sharp, of Ingomar. Miss Lippman was a member of the Triumph Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

Charles E. Minnick.

Funeral services for Charles E. Minnick, 51, yardmaster of the McKeesport Conecting Railroad, who died Saturday night will be held tomorrow afternoon at his home, 2713 Beaver street, McKeesport. Dr. E. E. Robb, of the Central Presbyterian Church, will have charge. He was a member of the Elks and Eagles lodges and had been a resident of McKeesport for 30 years. He leaves his widow, four daughters, Miss Marjory, Miss Virginia, Miss Beryl and Miss Betty, and a son, Charles.

Mrs. John Holloran.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at the home of George B. McDonough, 637 Lilie avenue, Braddock, for Mrs. Mary Holloran, who died yesterday. She leaves five grandchildren: John F. McDonough of Buffalo; George B. McDonough, Edward F. McDonough and Raymond A. McDonough, of Braddock, and Rita B. McDonough, of Swissvale.

George A. Hays.

Funeral services for George A. Hays, 67, who died Saturday, will be held tonight at his home, 160 Washington avenue, Edgewood. He leaves his widow, three sons, Fred, George, Jr., and Robert Hays, and three daughters, Mrs. Philip Robinson, Mrs. William Dibler and Mrs. Stephen Crump Taylor.

NORRIS TO SEE PRIMARY FOE

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Senator George W. Norris, of McCook, Neb., and his primary campaign opponent of only a few weeks, George W. Norris, a Broken Bow, Neb., grocer, may be brought face-to-face when U. S. Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate Campaign Funds Investigating Committee resumes the Nebraska campaign funds inquiry here today. Norris number two, Senator Nye said last night, had been summoned to appear before the committee to tell about his entry in the Nebraska Republican senatorial contest.

The resumed inquiry, Senator Nye said, would take up the thread of the Nebraska situation, where it was abandoned on July 21 when the Broken Bow candidate could not be located, in time to appear for questioning. A ruling of a state Supreme Court justice barred the grocer's name from the August 12 primary ballot because of his belated filing.

Reiterating his recent statement in Washington that the committee could and would prove that ulterior motives prompted the filing of the grocer, Senator Nye said this angle of the inquiry would be undertaken today.

WAR HEROINE BACK IN CUBA

HAVANA, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Evangeline Cisneros Romero, heroine of the Cuban war for independence, who last week regained her American citizenship after having lost it through marriage, once more is back in the country where she had so many harrowing experiences.

Mrs. Romero, upon her return here, was greeted at the docks by a group of congratulatory friends, and immediately went to her home.

The imprisonment for 18 months of this woman when she was a 17-year-old girl, her rescue by Carl Decker, a Hearst newspaperman, and her escape from Cuba, pursued by a Spanish gunboat, formed one of the most famous of the incidents which preceded the war between the United States and Spain.

Falls From Bridge After Stroke, Dies

NEW CASTLE, Sept. 22.—Samuel G. Alexander, 62, an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for 40 years, received injuries late Saturday that caused his death. En route home from work, he suffered a stroke and fell through an overhead bridge onto the tracks, 40 feet below.

Sharar Firemen's Memorial Speaker

ROCHESTER, Pa., Sept. 22.—W. H. Sharar, of Braddock, secretary of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's Association, was the principal speaker at the annual memorial services of the Beaver County Firemen's Association held here yesterday. The Rev. H. Reed Shepfer, also paid tribute to the firemen.

Auto Kills Boy, 7, Driver Cleared

BRADFORD, Pa., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Eugene Andrews, 7, of Pratt Hollow, was fatally injured near his home when struck by an automobile driven by Earl Johnson, of Lewis Run. Johnson was freed of blame at an inquest.

Injured Man Tells Of Attack in Auto

BEAVER FALLS, Sept. 22.—John Novak, 22, Ambridge, in the hospital with head lacerations, told police he had been struck over the head by a member of an automobile party and thrown out of the car.

CUTS SILK HOSE BILLS IN TWO

A New York fashion expert has just made a wonderful discovery. Realizing the expense of constantly buying silk hose and undergarments, she learned that with perspiration comes an oily excretion from the sebaceous glands that causes silks to rot.

Soap and water she found were really inadequate. Only a solvent like Energine could cut this film of oil.

So when next washing silk hose or dainty undergarments, add a tablespoonful of Energine to every quart of lukewarm, soapy water. Wash thoroughly—rinse well. Note the new cleanliness, the pleasing freshness—see how the original color is revived so easily, so quickly and with less rubbing.

After washing silk apparel by this new method, you'll be amazed at the difference in results from washing in just soap and water alone. And when you see how many more weeks' wear you get from every pair of hose, you'll be more than delighted—it's real economy.

Energine is unexcelled also for quickly removing all dirt and grease spots from dresses, hats, shoes, gloves, ties. Large can 35c. Energine is the world's largest selling cleaning fluid.

WE NOW PRESENT -:- By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

The Little German Band on the Warner Theater of the Air tonight on KDKA and WCAE brings to you, as O. B. Keeler reports of the New York Amateur Open Golf championship from Haverford, Pa. Gus Schmahl and his Lowry, Dick Powell and stage orchestra are booked for the Warner Revue.

Joan Andrews

Joan Andrews—and you'll have to agree she's pretty—is part of the Show Boat broadcast on KQV at 8:30.

It will be impossible for several days to publish the late returns in the Sun-Telegraph poll of favorite artists announcers and programs. Auditors are working overtime but still have much to do.

We enjoyed the Poet's Hour on WJAS Saturday night. The narrator did Joyce Kilmer's Trees with the perfection of the NBC announcer who introduces the Davey Hour.

And those Southland sketches over KDKA from New Orleans yesterday presented Negro spirituals the way we like them.

Fred Waring does a WLW broadcast at midnight.

Don Amalfo's version of WJAS at 10:30 tonight will have place in the marketplace of Seville, Spain on a feast day. A band of beggars try to outwit the governor of the city and Don Amalfo sides with them. Clavellito is a soprano solo.

QUESTION A DAY

Are Charles Hamp and Jack Little the same person? G. Paul Bright, 20 Bryn Mawr Road, Wilkinsburg.

Answer—No. Charley is a husky boy once played fullback in college football out on the Pacific Coast. Jack Little hails from Ohio and is of small feature. Both nice boys.

Lady Margaret Armstrong, wife of the British consulate-general in New York City, is a guest speaker of the Crime Prevention Hour from WJZ at 8:30 tonight. An incident from the records of the New York Police Department will be dramatized by Arthur B. Reeve, detective story writer.

Madame Schumann-Heink surprised us by singing "His Lullaby" instead of "Danny Boy" as scheduled. We would wager that there was something sentimental behind it. Could you hear the diva breathing between words?

* * *

At this point of the Enna Jettick concert we had stopped in a Ross street drugstore. Grouped about the radio were seven or eight persons whose facial expressions seemed to be pulling for the Madame to reach the high notes which she once sang with ease.

Sir Oliver Lodge's spiritual talk from London was a last minute decision at WJAS after it had been canceled once for Ann Leaf's organ recital.

Sir Oliver's theory that the mind is an entity and separate from the brain aroused real interest on the part of "Howdy" Clark, WJAS operator-announcer.

Except for a few static dashes the speech came over the Atlantic very well. Sir Oliver's voice is one of assurance and authority and even if one does not agree with him one must admire the scientist's courage of conviction.

"Judging from his voice I'd say Sir Oliver is 60 years old," ventured "Howdy" Clark after the broadcast.

Which only goes to prove again how radio can give us the wrong impression of a person's physical build or age. Sir Oliver is in his eightieth year.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Herbert Hoover, a Pennsylvania avenue spy reports, has yet to be late for a broadcast. On most of the occasions he addresses the public he has even been ahead of time.

Louis Reid

The President is a stickler for precision. Scheduled for a 30-minute talk he will not deviate 20 seconds from his assignment. No last-minute padding of the manuscript will do. No afterthought upon the subject at hand is permitted to find its way to the eardrums of the nation.

The introduction of the President is not unlike the fanfare which preceded the entrance of the king in the old costume dramas of the James K. Hackett era. There is a hush, and then in solemn, dignified tones the announcement: "Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States."

Armchairs Know When President Talks

At least we know when the President is talking. At least we have an advantage over British ear-cuppers. You may recall your armchair audience with the King when you waited for the royal introduction. You waited in vain. The King, you finally realized, had taken the air without the ceremony of an announcement.

There is plenty of attention-calling on this side when those in the seats of the mighty march to the microphones. The government has become what the boys call radio-minded. It is on the air regularly and often.

Only colored bands will go in for furious jazz effects. . . . "Sing a Simple Song" is the best of the current Broadway hosannas. . . . Approximately 25,000 artists parade to New York City microphones each month. More than half of them, it seems to me, are singers of gypsy songs. . . . Journalism, if it is linked with adventure, particularly adventure in covering revolutions, is paying as it has never paid before—on the radio. Oh, for an assignment to Central America. . . . Just a world of ballyhooing of the vacation glories of their states. They have more pressing work at hand. They have themselves to ballyhoo. The megaphone industry must be flourishing. Wonder if you can buy megaphone stock in America.

Radio has made such demands upon the tunesmiths that they have gone to such lengths as labeling numbers "Washing Dishes With My Sweetie" and "There's a Wah-Wah Girl in Agua Caliente." What is a wah-wah girl, anyway? Wah-wah used to be associated with trombones.

* * *

Trombones, incidentally, seldom penetrate the eardrums. They seem to have given way before the accordion and the musical saw.

One has only to be a little patient for the average tune to cease its agitation of the air waves. Can you recall when you last heard "You're the Cream in My Coffee" or "Pagan Love Song?"

Two-Piano Teams Numerous on Air

Two piano teams are becoming more and more numerous on the loudspeakers. The prevalence of them can be attributed to Phil Ohman and Victor Arden who are heard in several programs weekly. Originally members of Roxy's Gang, they played on the radio as far back as 1922. The alert Gershwin heard them and exhibited them to the customers of his girl-and-music shows, thereby giving jazz an intimate and refined note it hitherto had lacked.

The most cultivated precision on the air is that of the two piano teams. No ear has yet caught one member even as much as a quarter note ahead of the other.

Were the modern jazz songs suddenly to come under the ban in the republic and the banalities of the sombre nineties substituted, the first who would demand a return to present-day styles are loudest in their condemnation.

Nearly seven years have passed since Billy Jones and Ernie Hare began trapping radio wisecracks under the billing of the Happiness Boys. Until the M. Valbee swept out of the Yale-blue skies they were the most popular entertainers on the air. They still count their listeners among the millions.

Jones is forty-seven and Hare five years younger. Born on the same day of the month, March 15—the Ides of March, have been kind to them—they are also of the same height and weight. Their first meeting was in a phonograph recording studio.

SUSPECT FREED IN SHOOTING

Stanley Slowinski, of 1437 Penn avenue, known as "Big Peanuts," was discharged in North Side police court today in the shooting of John Rutowski, proprietor of a confectionery store at 860 Carpenter way, after police reported the wounded man could not identify him. A message was at once sent over the police teletype for the arrest of "Little Peanuts," said to be a friend of Slowinski.

Rutkowski was shot in the right leg by one of three men following an altercation in his store last night. They escaped in an automobile. Rutkowski is in the Allegheny General Hospital.

Find Man Victim Of Mystery Shot

McKeesport police were investigating the shooting of George Knezovic, 23, found wandering in Rebecca street early today with two bullet wounds in his abdomen.

Taken to McKeesport Hospital, he denied any knowledge of the shooting, police say.

The Quality is Higher, but the Price Isn't . . .

BETTERED quality without increase of price is frequently achieved by improved, modernized production methods.

This is true in the case of Amaizo Syrups, where quality excels, and yet the housewife is asked to pay no more.

A trial of Amaizo Golden Syrup or of Amaizo Crystal White Syrup will quickly prove their superiority.

All grocers sell them, in cans of convenient sizes identified by the Amaizo name and the gingham background design. They cost no more than ordinary syrups.

TOLLING BELLS HONOR ANDREE

AALESUND Norway Sept 22—(AP)—The Swedish gunboat Svensksund bearing the bodies and relics of the air pioneers Salomon August Andree Nils Strindberg and Knut Frankel arrived here today escorted by the Norwegian government steamer Michael Sars and many sealers fishing boats and cutters

Great crowds were assembled along the quays to greet the funeral ship as it passed with its sailors standing at attention on the deck. The people stood with uncovered heads while church bells tolled and all buildings in the town flew flags at half staff

After passing along the quay the Svensksund swung around, and, followed by its imposing escort, steamed out of the fiord on the way down the coast to Sweden.

SIX TRAPPED IN FIRE RESCUED

The wife and five children of Alex Gacsaly trapped on the second floor of their home 701 Railroad street, Springdale, early today by flames, were forced to leap from the second-story window to safety below

In their leap Mrs Gacsaly and her daughters, Bertha 2 and Elizabeth 10 suffered shock and bruises and were attended by physicians and removed to a nearby home

The fire, fought for nearly three hours by Springdale and Cheswick firemen, destroyed the two-story frame dwelling Damage was estimated at $5,000. The blaze is believed to have originated on the first floor

The crying of Bertha spread the alarm, and Gacsaly led his family to the front porch roof where he dropped them one by one into the arms of waiting neighbors.

CHANNEL GALE KILLS NINE

LONDON, Sept 22—(INS)—The storm-battered channel coasts of both France and England recovered their breath today following a terrific three-day gale that at times mounted to a velocity of 100 miles an hour

Nine persons were known to have perished on the French side of the coast with damage to coastal property and shipping believed heavy

According to an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Boulogne, the trawler Notre Dame des Argentes limped into port hours behind schedule with two survivors of the Dutch steamer Foxhol which sank off the Goodwin sandbanks with the loss of the captain, his wife and child, and a deckhand Advices from Paris stated four sailors were known to have drowned.

The swirling wind, which whipped the channel and North Sea into furious waves of mountainous heights, strewed both shores with land and sea wreckage

WATERS WILL AID PINCHOT

PHILADELPHIA Sept 22.—(AP)—Charles A. Waters, auditor general of Pennsylvania, announced in a statement yesterday he would support Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for governor, and the whole Republican ticket.

Declaring that certain elements in the Republican party in Philadelphia appeared to be giving "aid and comfort" to John Hemphill, Democratic and Liberal party gubernatorial candidate Mr Waters said that if the Philadelphia Republican organization failed to aid the whole Republican ticket in the coming campaign it would "play right into the hands" of the Democrats

Waters' statement said:

"Masked behind a wet and dry issue, some disgruntled Republicans, Raskob Democrats and a few sincere wets are holding up the banner of the Liberal party in an effort to overthrow the will of the Republicans of the state as expressed in the recent primary election.

"While I have been tolerant and deferential to those associated with me in the discharge of my duties, who disagreed with me in the primary election, I cannot condone treason to the party to which we hold allegiance."

PITTSBURGH'S THIRD INDUSTRY

CERAMIC PRODUCTS

CERAMICS constitutes one of the greatest industries of the Pittsburgh district, and under this head comes the manufacture of glass, enamel, electrical porcelain, tile, stoneware, cooking and sanitary ware, bricks.

Although this industry had its beginnings among the ancients, thousands of years ago, the tremendous proportions to which production has grown today are the result of modern methods . . . modern equipment . . . electricity.

The proximity of glass sand and clay deposits . . . natural resources of coal, iron and gas . . . an advantageous location as a shipping center . . . have made the Pittsburgh district a leader in the manufacture of ceramics. The application of electricity in Pittsburgh plants has made possible the annual production of hundreds of millions of glass bottles and jars . . . thousands of tons of brick and tile . . . endless cooking utensils, enamel signs and sanitary-ware.

It has been the privilege of the Duquesne Light Company to have been associated with the development of this huge industry . . . 50 years of electrical service, now so extensively used in the manufacture of ceramic products.

The services of skilled electrical engineers are at the disposal of manufacturers of ceramic products. They are prepared to give advice on planning and distribution of electric power without obligation. Call Grant 4300 . . . line 233.

PROMISES A LOT —AND MAKES GOOD!

A prominent dentist was speaking: "Yes, PEBECO Tooth Paste actually does the things that so many tooth pastes merely claim to do. It really cleans the teeth, whitens them and stimulates a steady flow of saliva that helps ward off decay." . . . He is correct! Don't be carried away by false values and exorbitant claims when there IS a dentifrice whose unusual service is definitely affirmed by scientific proof and years of success in actual use. It is Pebeco. Just try it one week and make your own judgment.

CHAPTER I.

"Oh, Dale! Take a look at this!"

Robin Dale tossed the editorial room of the Daily Journal. Bailey, the city editor, handed him a letter. Dale sat down beside the desk to read it. A quick glance at the signature aroused his immediate attention.

It was signed with a symbol —"A—Z."

"Another nut!" What's this about?" Dale had time to comment before he started to read. The answer hurled itself at him from the paper he held.

"Dear Sir:

"You have not published the code message sent you—too bad—for your information there is more work for the police now. Tonight at 10 o'clock Armour was bumped off near Kings Highway. You will find him on a side road near a farmhouse.

"Thirteen more men and one woman will go the same way if they do not return the missing papers. I advise you to publish the code message or tomorrow one more will go.

"On July 16 at 9 p. m. I will be in the bay to get B. D. W-5.

"You may let them know 3—Z is the man behind the gun—he asks no quarter, and will give none. 3—Z."

"This is serious, Chief. Has all the earmarks of a lunatic and yet . . . damn it, the threat sounds sane enough. Any news of this Armour person?"

"Not a thing."

"Where are the first two letters, Mr. Bailey?"

"They're still at headquarters. Better run over and see Capt. Blake and take that letter along. Tell him I think we ought to print all three, the two he has and this one, unless there's a reason for withholding them longer."

Dale rose, folded the letter and shoved it into his pocket.

"All I can say is that hell will be loose if they find there's any truth to this Armour killing."

Fifteen minutes later Robin Dale was closeted with Capt. Blake, of the homicide squad. Sergt. Jardin happened to be at headquarters and was also present. Blake read the new letter and for several moments after he had laid it down made no comment. Finally he turned to Jardin.

"Jardin, check up with the stations along the Highway in Brooklyn, and report right back to me!"

After Jardin had left Capt. Blake rose and walked slowly to the window. He gazed out as if preoccupied. Something troubled him.

"Anything new with the Ryerson woman?" Dale asked.

Blake shook his head and then replied. She sticks to her story about the man with the fish eyes. Can't get her to say anything different. I thought she was stalling and now you bring this new letter. Can't make a thing out of it."

They were discussing Mae Ryerson who had been in custody for three days in connection with an atrocious murder committed two days prior to her arrest. It had taken place in a sparsely-populated section of Brooklyn near a highway which obliquely traverses that borough. The location was popular with "petters," two or three dozen cars being parked there nightly.

The murder in question had been discovered by the police early one morning. Anton Kasper, a small East New York shopkeeper, was found dead in his parked car. He had been shot through the brain by a pistol held very close to his head. His pockets had been ransacked, many of them turned inside out, and all articles of identification were gone. Upon the seat beside him was a womans coat, marked with bloodstains.

Through the license number of the car the victim was identified. For two days the police traced the woman with only the blood-stained cloak as a clue and then took Mae Ryerson into custody. They found her at her parents' home on the outskirts of Flatbush, a suburb of Brooklyn.

Mae Ryerson admitted having been with Kasper. She told a lurid story of his death. A man, whom she could only describe as having "fish-eyes" came to the car and at the point of a pistol demanded certain papers of Kasper. He denied any knowledge of the papers asked for and then, without warning, the prowler shot and killed Kasper. The murderer then proceeded to ransack the dead man's pockets.

The girl, paralyzed by fear, watched all this believing that she would be the next to die. However, she told the police, the man finally escorted her to a nearby bus line and rode with her to the nearest elevated station where they both alighted. The man quickly disappeared into the crowds which were still about at that hour—it being only 10 o'clock.

When questioned by the police as to her reason for not coming forward when the body of Anton Kasper was found, she said that she was ashamed of having been out riding with a married man and decided to remain silent.

All efforts of the police to make her change this story were of no avail. She had clung to it tenaciously, hysterically, in fact.

"I wonder if I could look over the first two letters again, Captain?" Dale asked after another stretch of silence.

Capt. Blake came back to the desk, took the letters from a locked drawer and handed them to Dale.

The first one, received a day after the discovery of the murder of Anton Kasper, was addressed to the city editor of the Daily Journal. It read like any one of the dozens sent in by cranks after every crime. Dale, however, now studied it with renewed interest.

"Kindly print this message in your paper for Kasper's friends: BB-NY PRTS VITD LTM-Ph.

"By doing this you may save their lives. And the woman may know where the missing papers are—he tried to use them for blackmail. 3-Z."

It was from the second letter that Robin Dale got his first clue to the identity of the mysterious slayer. It was another letter signed with the symbolic 3-Z and explained the manner of Kasper's death. The reason for the crime, the self-confessed slayer stated, was that Kasper would not give up certain papers. The note also endeavored to exonerate Mae Ryerson of all blame, naming her the victim of unfortunate circumstances. But the heading was what interested Dale.

"Ref. Kasper," was written above the "Dear Sir" salutation.

"Captain, it's only in official circles, like the army, that this method of stating the subject matter of a letter is used. That slender thread seems to be about the only thing to go on, so far—that is, if the girl's story is the truth."

Sergeant Jardin burst into the room at this point. He was all excited. "A Philip Armour's been found murdered over on Briar road in Brooklyn!"

Urges U. S. Sell Stamp Space for Advertising

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22 — (AP.) — The sale of space on postage stamps to private interests for advertising purposes has been suggested by Representative Celler, Democrat, New York, as a possible means of eliminating the postal deficit without raising the postage rates on first-class mail.

Expressing opposition to Postmaster General Brown's proposal for a rate increase of a half cent an ounce on sealed letters, the New Yorker, in a letter to the Postmaster General, said the increase "will not meet with any hearty response in Congress."

He also took issue with Brown's statement that there was no justification for asking the government to transport mail for less than cost.

There Are Good Reasons Why

The Women Who Know

Their Fashions Are Shopping at

BOGGS & BUHL

A person can usually do well the thing he is interested in—and so can a store. And Boggs & Buhl's chief interest these days is Fashion. Not the freakish, experimental fashions. Not the flossy, temperamental fashions. But the fashions that get to be fashions because a large number of smart, sensible people decide that they are good.

In every part of Pittsburgh women are talking about "Boggs & Buhl's Fashions"

The news has gone around Pittsburgh and vicinity that Boggs & Buhl has new and unequalled connections with the authoritative sources of Fashion.

It's getting to be known with ever-increasing rapidity that the Fashions at Boggs & Buhl are reliably understood by the store . . . that only the really important Fashions appear here . . . and that they appear fast . . . at the very same time that they are appearing in New York . . . and in versions authentic and chic and beautiful. We are not surprised that the smart women who know their Fashions are shopping at Boggs & Buhl.

It's smart to shop at Boggs & Buhl where fashion is a business — not a mystery . . .

But then—you probably have found that out—long ago!

ROCKEFELLER'S HOME GUARDED

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 22 —(AP.)— Extra details of police and firemen patroled the streets last night in an effort to apprehend an incendiary who kindled fires in the Highland Manor Girls School, two residences and a garage.

Additional guards were posted at the estate of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., on the outskirts of the town. Many citizens kept vigils over their homes.

The first fire was discovered early Sunday in the home of Vincent Ceccolini, a real estate dealer. The occupants barely escaped. Ten minutes later the school building was found to be ablaze, but there were no pupils in the dormitory at the time. An hour afterward the porch of the second residence caught fire and 20 minutes afterward the garage was in flames.

Oil Fields to Adopt 80 Per Cent Basis

FRANKLIN, Sept. 22.—Pennsylvania oil fields other than the Bradford-Allegheny area today began to operate at 80 per cent capacity instead of 70 per cent, under the curtailment plan, according to announcement of Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association. Bradford-Allegheny field production is increased to 60 per cent of capacity.

Improvement in operating conditions is evident, oil men declare.

Workman Honored On 75th Birthday

CONNELLSVILLE, Sept. 22.—Employes in the mold shop of the Capstan Glass Company honored C. A. "Dad" Knight, veteran worker, on his seventy-fifth birthday. He was honor guest at a dinner at Poplar terrace and a five-minute program was broadcast over a Morgantown, W. Va., radio station to mark the event.

RELIEF THAT KONJOLA GAVE CAME TO STAY

Carpenter Delighted With Way New and Different Medicine Conquered His Rheumatism.

Konjola, the new and different medicine of 32 ingredients, is not designed to give mere temporary relief. It is emphatically not that kind of medicine.

MR. T. A. STROHM

Rarely a day passes but that some happy man or woman returns to the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, to tell of the lasting results from this modern medicine for the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Visit the Konjola Man and get all the facts about this remarkable medicine that has done so many remarkable things. Hear of any number of cases as interesting and encouraging as that of Mr. T. A. Strohm, carpenter, R. F. D. No. 2, Sharpsburg, near this city. Right now read what he said to the Konjola Man:

"Last February, Konjola gave me quick relief from rheumatism and kidney trouble. The pains were so severe I could not sleep, and often I was in such misery I could not work. I had terrible headaches and was always taking laxatives. My whole system was in a deplorable condition. But it took only four bottles of Konjola to free me of all my ailments. I have been at work every day, and I can easily understand why so many people are enthusiastic about Konjola."

Thus Konjola works, speedily and thoroughly, yet it is best to take a complete treatment of from six to eight bottles for best results.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow drug store, Penn avenue and Sixth street, Pittsburgh, where daily he is meeting the public and explaining all about this remarkable medicine.

HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM IN REVIEW; LOCAL AMUSEMENT NOTES

Perfect Butlers in Films And Not in England After All

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 22.

The perfect butlers are not in England, but in Hollywood.

At least six players are noted for their impersnation of butlers on the screen.

Nicholas Soussanin (husband of Olga Baclanova) is still remembered for his portrayal of the butler who wept in Adolphe Menjou's "Service for Ladies." Edgar Norton is another actor who is noted for his perfect butthing. You saw him in "The Love Parade." Others are Bar Harburgh Wilson Bangs Harold Nelson and Sidney Bracey.

Adolphe Menjou

Many of these actors have stolen scenes from principals. Buttling is a profitable profession out here.

A BABY DIES

The death of a baby has thrown Pathe's location for "The Painted Desert" into gloom.

With high hopes, a Los Angeles mother boarded a train a short time ago, carrying her 18-month-old child. She was on her way to the painted desert where the baby was to appear in a motion picture. It was to portray Bill Boyd as an infant. Later on thousands would see it on the screen. The future perhaps might hold a successful screen career.

But tragedy intervened. The baby died.

Now, as ever the show must go on. Pathe officials have secured another baby. It is a 10-month-old boy who was born on the desert. He will take the part and he will be seen by thousands.

Other troubles have beset the film troupe. Storms have swept the location which is in the desert, 27 miles from the little town of Cameron.

But they will remain until the necessary scenes are shot. In the meanwhile they feel sorrowful about the mother whose baby is dead. It is one of the tragedies that are hard to bear.

PECULIAR MENTOR

According to a studio publicity story, a certain foreign actor learning English spends hours a day listening to a good radio announcer.

Considering the other hours he must spend trying to find one, it is difficult to see how he ever makes a picture.

LOIS' BET

Lois Moran has a new young man, but it's probably not serious.

He has gone so far, however, as to bet Lois $500 that she can't lay off cigarets until December. She's taken the bet and that's that.

Lois Moran.

According to friends the pair met on shipboard when Lois was 17 years old. The young man was returning from Cambridge University. He is now in his father's contracting business in the East.

TIP OFF

Look for the best of all the screen fights in Pathe's forthcoming picture "Her Man." This free-for-all took five days to film and sent several men to the hospital. The U. S. C. football team, all the available Hollywood stunt men and a sprinkling of professional boxers were used. I've seen the episode in a preview, and take it from me, it's the acme of screen brawls.

'COMMON CLAY' HERE SECOND TIME AS HARRIS FILM

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Constance Bennett is appearing on the Harris screen in "Common Clay," the picture which was popular with audiences and with some of the critics when it was presented in the Penn about four weeks ago. It is a melodrama seeping with sentiment. But, in a way, it is a glorious picture. It is alive breathing. We said that when it was in the Penn and we repeat it now.

The story is that of a gay life girl, who gets a ride in the police wagon and then makes up her mind in favor of the virtuous life. She gets a job as house maid with a wealthy family. Which leads her right into a romance with an aristocratic lad. The boy goes away to college. A baby comes—and so does the dramatic situations. The boy wants to marry the girl. But his father says "no." Buy the girl off is his idea. And so it goes until the fadeout, when the bluebirds chirp merrily.

Miss Bennett portrays the girl with convincing earnestness. Lew Ayres from "All Quiet on the Western Front" days, does well enough as the boy. And Beryl Mercer's old lady portrayal is as usual, an effective and sincere piece of work.

Short screen entertainment is on the bill.

Floating Night Club Retains Floor Show

The Show Boat, Sixth and Duquesne way, will keep its current floor show over for another week. Entertainers include Nat Nazarro, Jr., master of ceremonies; Jerrie Blanchard, singer; "Fuzzy" Knight with his syncopated piano; Joan Andrews, personality girl; Hannah and Mary, dancers, and Ten Daughters of Eve, in dance routines. The show was conceived by Joe Hiller. Lou Boulton arranged the dances. The music is by Jimmy Carr's orchestra.

Things I Never Knew Till Now

That before you can make near beer you have to make real beer.

That at Rome there were two temples, one dedicated to Virtue, the other to Honor. No way to enter the last but through the first.

That to speak "broad Scotch" is to speak plainly.

That the "No Smoking" signs in the subway are not put there by the Fire Department, but by the Department of Health.

That Alaskan Malamute huskies are barkless dogs.

That curly hair is rheumatic hair, and that no one inherits a disease. (Look, look! He's getting scientific!)

That in the Parisian underworld argot there are over one hundred words for "naughty girl."

That Sir Thomas Lipton's coat of arms contains, among other things, a branch of tea leaves.

That another thing you never knew till this minute is that daughters of the family should not use the crest of the house.

That it takes seven years to grow good asparagus.

That the average man over 25 years old cannot learn telegraphy. The ears are not acute enough to distinguish the wired code.

That Louis XIV first introduced the uniform in the French army.

That the gilded iron cross over the new entrance to the Harvard College Library was captured from the French at Louisburg in 1745.

That on being presented to a Prince of a reigning house, his name is never mentioned. So be careful the next time.

That Orientals when making a rug never make a perfect design, erring purposely, as Allah creates the perfect things.

That a signet ring worn on the right hand is incorrect. Left.

That in the case of an apparent breach of discipline at West Point, the cadet who is questioned need only answer "Okay, sir," to establish the fact that he has permission to do what he is doing.

That Panama hats are not woven under water. Poddon me.

That there is no such place as "New York City." It is "The City of New York." You wouldn't say Boston City or San Francisco City, would youse? Salt Lake City and Sioux City have that latter word as part of their official attachment, a la The Hague or Le Havre.

That seasickness originates in the ears, you dopes! Deaf people and infants do not wear portholes for lavalieres.

That the reason why a drunk sees "double" is that the eye muscle arrangement goes screwy. No can-trol.

That the W. U. Telegraph Co. forbids its operators to tell a woman news of a death via the 'phone because women usually faint from the shock and that W. U. wouldn't be certain if the message was delivered. Men do not matter.

That during the last Presidential campaign the Republicans issued "Lucky" pieces which read: "Good For 4 Years of Prosperity!"

That a Frankfort guy discovered that he had accidentally invented sauerkraut by losing a cabbage in a vat of wine that had soured.

That Pennsylvania has 32 newspapers 100 yrs. old.

That it rains in Mexico City daily at 3 p. m. (Don't quote me!)

That if one of a pair of love birds dies—the mate can be saved by placing a mirror in the cage.

That you walk in a circle if lost in the woods.

That Chaucer was the first English poet to be buried in Westminster Abbey. And that Tennyson once advised Ellen Terry to say "luncheon" and not "lunch." Incidentally, "I have et" is correct in England.

That a nectarine is a cross between a plum and a peach.

That in the bar-room scene of "The Girl From the Golden West," at the Metropolitan, the chorus "miners" are served real brandy.

That a Washington boy made a violin out of 2,500 safety matches.

That New Orleans was the coolest spot in the country last Summer according to the U. S. Weather Bureau.

That more women than men say they like the column's poems because "they are so neat and very handy to enclose in letters."

That yawning is due to a lack of oxygen, and not from reading anything that appears in this space. What conceit!!!

And that Paul Whiteman was recently presented with a baby Austin car—which he is using as a watch charm!

Comedy

Joan Peers will be seen in support of Joe Cook in a comedy film, "Rain or Shine," in the Stanley, opening Thursday.

NEW PLAYS TONIGHT; OTHERS NEXT WEEK

Tonight the curtain will rise on the regular theatrical season in the Nixon with the Theater Guild's production of George Bernard Shaw's drama, "The Apple Cart." The engagement will be for one week.

The Nixon attraction scheduled for next Monday is "Brown Buddies," a Negro musical comedy featuring Bill Robinson and Adelaide Hall.

"Dracula," the vampire mystery play, opens a week's engagement and the season in the Alvin tonight.

Next week's production in the Alvin will be "Candle Light," featuring Eugenie Leontovich, Russian actress. Seats for this will go on sale Thursday.

The George Sharp Players will present "Those We Love" in the Pitt tonight.

The stock attraction in the Pitt next week will be "The Wasp's Nest," heralded as a mystery comedy.

"Ten Nights in a Barroom" opens tonight as the new attraction on Capt. Menke's Golden Rod Showboat at Montrose, just above Aspinwall.

GERMANS FETE OCEAN FLIERS

POTSDAM, Germany, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Capt. Wolfgang Von Gronau made a triumphant return from his fine flight across the North Atlantic from Germany to the United States.

With his three companions on the flight, he flew in his Dornier-Wal flying boat from Hamburg to Berlin and came down on Templin Lake, near Potsdam, amid the deafening cheers of thousands and the blowing of sirens and horns. Capt. Von Gronau and his party boarded a government steamer for an official welcome.

Later the four airmen were entertained by the former Crown Prince and Princess and Prince August Wilhelm at an exclusive club. The wife of Capt. Koehl, who flew the Atlantic in the "Bremen," presented Von Gronau with a huge bottle of Rhine wine.

West View Trade Board to Meet

The West View Board of Trade meets tonight for its first meeting of the fall season in No. 3 engine house, Perrysville avenue. Ray Wertz, assistant divisional superintendent of the State Highway Department, will speak on "Safety on the Perry Highway."

EDISON DODGES FLIERS' 'PLOT'

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Suspecting an organized conspiracy to take him above the clouds, Thomas A. Edison refused to budge when Newark airport officials suggested he just hop into an amphibian and look at the shiny gadgets. He answered:

"Not yet, not yet."

Edison drank hot milk he brought with him in a vacuum bottle and took an intense interest in all the activities at the field.

He expressed delight at the maneuvers of an auto-gyro and after seeing several other craft perform, he exclaimed:

"These planes will soon do everything except chew tobacco."

Girl Hurt at Horse Show Recovering

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 22.—Miss Louise Cook, 21, of Johnstown, is recovering today in the Westmoreland Hospital from injuries received when she fell Saturday from her horse at the horse show at the Polo Grounds. She suffered concussion of the brain and two fractures of the left arm.

Miss Janet Cook, of Indiana, was uninjured when thrown from her horse earlier in the day. George H. Musk, of Indiana, also was thrown.

Cruze Bosses His Former Wife—In Movies

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 22.—(INS.)—Things like this do happen in Hollywood.

When cast and staff assembled for filming a talking picture, "Discontent," Betty Compson, blonde actress, was in the cast and James Cruze, the director, whom she divorced in May after a series of marital spats, was telling her just what to do—and getting away with it.

Dormont Men Held As Liquor Carriers

WAYNESBURG, Sept. 22.—John Finne, 48, and Ellis Baker, 35, Dormont salesmen, were ordered held for court under bond of $300 each here following their arrest on charges of violating the liquor laws. Police said a small amount of liquor was found in a search of their car near Waynesburg.

Lake Yields Body Of Erie Resident

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—The body of Valentine Seifert, 50, of Erie, Pa., was recovered from Lake Erie Sunday. He was believed to have fallen into the water from a dock here Saturday, and drowned.

MOTORIST SHOT BY DRY AGENT

OWENSBORO, Ky., Sept. 12.—(AP.)—Buck Simms, 32, an alleged rum runner, was shot and wounded seriously here by Prohibition Agent W. T. Mastin, who sought to arrest him on a charge of transporting whisky. Mastin said he fired only to frighten Simms.

The dry agent said Simms struck at him when he jumped on the running board of Simms' car to search it for whisky. Simms was accompanied by his wife, who was charged with transporting and possessing liquor, and released under $350 bond. Simms was under guard at a hospital. No charge has been placed against Mastin.

Highway Patrol Corporal Dismissed

BERWICK, Pa., Sept. 22—(AP.)—Officials of the highway patrol sub-station here said Corp. Joseph Felix has been dismissed from the service. They said Felix was ordered to go to Harrisburg and turn in his equipment, but that he failed to obey and they are now seeking him. They refused further comment.

Sharing Good Things

Helping yourself you help Pennsylvania

The best customer your state has for the food it produces is A & P. The reason is simple: A & P has to buy a larger supply of this food than anyone else because of the demand for it from hosts of housewives all over the country who trade in A & P stores.

This helps the producer just as A & P methods help you. Producers, to prosper, must have sure, quick, and good markets. You, to be satisfied, must have the best of what you like at the lowest possible cost.

Ask the food industries of Pennsylvania who are their very big customers—for their canned vegetables, meat products, candy, mushrooms, and other famous products. Last year A & P bought more than $31,282,000 worth at a fair price, and will buy still more this year.

Why a low price to you and a fair price to producers? . . . Because all the money you pay A & P for food—less only actual expenses and A & P's small service charge—goes to the producers.

PEKIN TAKEN BY GOVERNMENT

SHANGHAI, Sept. 22.—(Universal)—Marshal Chang Psuen-Luang and his Manchurian forces have occupied Pekin on the heels of Gen. Yen Hsi-Shan's evacuating army according to dispatches reaching here. The Manchurian army is expected to occupy Tientsin soon.

The fact that Chang's forces took over the capital of the northern rebel coalition against the Nanking government without any opposition is interpreted here as indicating that Yen has reached some sort of an understanding with the Mukden war lord.

Advices from Pekin, however, state that the purpose of the invasion from Mukden has not yet been explained. It is supposed in the city that Chang is anxious to secure the revenues of the surrounding territory and obtain political posts for his lieutenants.

Dry Sleuth Trio Freed in Bribery

SEATTLE, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Less than six hours and a half of jury deliberation on six weeks testimony has resulted in acquittal for Roy C. Lyle, suspended prohibition administrator, and three former assistants all charged with conspiracy and accepting bribes.

The federal jury reported its verdict to a court room nearly filled with friends of the defendants. Lyle, William Whitney, his assistant, Earl Corwin and R. L. Fryant, former dry agents.

They were charged with accepting bribes from rum runners in a conspiracy to permit wholesale importations of liquor into Western Washington.

Man Ends Shooting Argument by Suicide

AVONDALE, Mo., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Smith Kidwell, 50-year-old barber, put an end to an argument with his family about a double shooting here earlier in the day by putting an end to his life.

Avondale's second tragedy in a day due to family quarrels came about late yesterday when Kidwell discussed with his wife, his daughter and his mother-in-law, the wounding of J. Wesley Stewart and his wife, in what police described as an attempt at murder and suicide.

Soviet Government Shifts Fiscal Date

MOSCOW, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The central executive committee has decreed that the Soviet fiscal year shall begin January 1 instead of October 1, the date of the revolution.

Since the Soviet obtained control all dates have been based on the revolutionary day. The change apparently was ordered to bring conformity in the Soviet's international fiscal relations.

Ruth Bryan Urges Child Aid Bureau

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Representative Ruth Bryan Owen (Dem.), of Florida, will introduce a bill in the coming session of Congress to provide a department of child welfare, it was made known today.

The new department, under her proposal, would be an additional federal department, and its head would be a woman member of the President's cabinet.

Hundreds See Boy Slain in Station

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—A 19-year-old boy was slain in a crowded subway station while hundreds looked on. The killer escaped in the crowd.

Patsy Saratina, the victim, was slain by a shot fired at close range as he walked up some stairs. The entire crowd in the Union Square station was thrown into confusion by the pistol shot.

ORDERS LIQUOR DESTROYED

Judge R. M. Gibson today signed an order in Federal Court for the destruction of a quantity of alcoholic beverages seized in a recent raid on a Fifth avenue speakeasy.

The seizure made August 23 on a speakeasy on the second floor of 1108 Fifth avenue included 460 bottles of beer, 110 pints of whisky and 102 pints of gin.

The order was made when claimants failed to appear to answer motion to claim the liquor or show cause why it should not be destroyed.

Doug and Mary May Quit as Producers

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 22.—(INS.)—Retirement of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford from the financing of production of pictures was seen today in reports from New York that Howard Hughes, young millionaire producer, was negotiating for their holdings in the Art Finance Company, a subsidiary organization of United Artists.

The next two pictures to be made by Miss Pickford and Fairbanks are to be financed by the Art Finance Company, it was announced. Heretofore they have financed their own pictures.

SIX KILLED IN TRAFFIC OVER WEEK-END

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

A man rapped on the door of City Detective Guy Dailey's home a few days ago and said that he was from the Humane Society and had come to investigate reports that the Daileys harbored a vicious dog.

"Come here, Mr. Woo," Dailey signalled the dog. (That's the dog's name, not Mr. Wu but Mr. Woo). A Pekinese of no size at all scampered up to the door, minus the blue ribbons it has won at various shows.

The man who said he was from the Humane Society looked down at the tiny Pekinese, shook his head, chuckled and went away.

That 74-year-old "Noah" who did the old and new dances in the stage show at the Stanley recently was William Farrell, remembered in Jeannette as "Wiggi" Farrell. Until he was 50, Wiggi Farrell had never been on the stage. Before that he was a glass worker in Jeannette. He and Christ Lampe, still of Jeannette, would race each other to see which could "blow" the most glass in a single turn. Now Wiggi does a turn on the stage in an act which includes his son, also a dancer.

Mr. Lampe went backstage to see his old friend and they recalled the time Wiggi went to Cleveland. Work at the glass factories was slack, so Wiggi and a pal went to Cleveland. A few days later, after a proper celebration, the friend wired back to Jeannette: ARRIVED SAFELY STOP WIGGI DEAD.

Wiggi's family was still in a state of mourning when he himself returned to Jeannette. It developed the friend had neglected to add the one revealing word to the telegram.

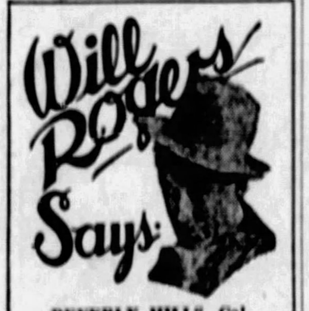
Early the other morning a practical joker hung a realistic dummy from the East street bridge and immediately telephoned the police and fire bureaus that a man had hanged himself on the bridge. The fire truck of No. 46 Engine Company rushed to the bridge but broke down near, as they say, the scene. No. 50 company's truck was then called. And Capt. Tony Block, of No. 12 police station, arrived with a guard of cops. A crowd collected while firemen and police tried to reach the dummy, which was hanging from the floor of the bridge. A Harmony street car passed and the motorman stopped and placed the car's light on the pseudo-suicide. It looked real, so to speak. Finally the dummy was lifted up to the bridge. There was much disgust and taking of names in vain. Capt. Block's men tossed the dummy into the patrol and, at the police station, after one and all had kicked it around, it was tossed into the garbage pile and hauled away.

The point is that if any of the police had bothered to investigate the inside pocket of the dummy's coat he'd have discovered the name of the practical joker.



BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 22.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Just reading in this paper where U. S. Senator "so and so" had just returned from Russia described what was needed there, and Senator "what's his name" told of conditions in Central Europe and what was needed to put them on a paying basis. Now there is 96 of 'em in there, and wouldn't you think there would be one that would take a squint at home, and tell us what was the matter with us, not that there is anything, but just in case there was. Remember to send your dollar air mail to Mayor Walker to help buy Lipton a new yacht.

Yours,

WILL.

LUCKY GIRL

BY HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Cathie Tells Gordon That She Loves Him

CHAPTER XXV.

They walked along the rim of what seemed to be a crater . . . it was really the unfinished dam. Below were many levels, and men climbing like ants up and down the scarred sides. Overhead great beacon lights flared, and men seemed to be working far upward, half way up to the sky. There was the sound of crunching rock, of running water, of the steady whirring of many machines. And the cold, the cold of a mountain night, pressed close to them, almost painful to breathe.

The flashlights of the elder Moore and her husband were ahead. Cathie and Gordon followed. Sometimes Moore talked, explaining things. Cathie listened, but the words meant nothing. She was listening to the song of the machines, and the wild singing in her heart.

Here she was, in the mountains with him . . . and it wasn't her fault . . . Mr. Farnsworth brought her . . . she could put out her hand and touch him . . . not her fault . . . Alfred's . . .

Alfred halted the procession. He wanted to see the great cement mixer that took sand and rocks and pebbles and stirred them into the mixture with enormous iron hands.

"You and Gordon better wait outside, it's pretty dusty for a lady," David Moore said in his harsh voice, so like Gordon's, yet so unlike it.

Seems Unreal
Like Beginning of the World

"If you climb up a bit further you can get a better view of the project," Gordon said, taking her arm in his, guiding her over the slippery sand and rock to a wooden platform overlooking the crater.

It was a hard climb, because of the slippery sand, and the darkness. Cathie was breathing hard when they reached it and the clear cold air whipped the scarlet color into her cheeks, so that she glowed, with a curious, tingling exhilaration.

The whole thing was unreal, and clouds of misty fog rolling in, dimming the flaring lights, served to make it more so. It was like creation, like the beginning of the world.

Standing there on the little wooden platform in the darkness, Gordon Moore was very near to her. Her husband and his brother had disappeared into the shed-like building that housed the machinery. Somewhere, off in the darkness the blind aunt, and the old uncle waited, and somewhere, in another world her mother . . . Ruth . . . the family . . . Chester . . . troubles . . . Far away . . . unreal . . .

The pounding went on, and sometimes it seemed to be the machinery and sometimes it was in her heart. She leaned back against the railing behind her, and it wasn't a railing, it was Gordon Moore's arm.

A Kiss
Tells Gordon That She Loves Him

The pounding in her heart, or the sound of machinery seemed to get louder . . . or was it that she was dizzy? And there was a roaring in her ears.

"I—I feel awfully funny!" She lifting her head to say it when somehow, without any volition of her own, she was kissing Gordon, or was he kissing her? She didn't know how it had happened, or how it could ever stop. "Oh, my dear, my dear!" She felt his arms crushing her closer, hurting her. After a long while—how long she didn't know—she saw lights coming out of the fog, and voices . . . her husband and the elder Moore.

Gordon's arms relaxed, dropped to his sides. Cathie waited motionless, for the men to come nearer. Something in her brain was asking, "Did they see?" But she couldn't seem to care . . . it didn't matter . . . nothing mattered, now that Gordon loved her. . . . She could even give him up. She wanted to tell him that, but the others kept coming nearer, calling "Hello!—where are you . . . sing out, will you?"

She stood on tiptoes, and put her hands on Gordon's shoulders. There was so much to say, and no time, no time.

"I love you so," she whispered. "So—so much!"

She felt his hands gripping her shoulders again, and broke away. Down the muddy path she ran, slipping and sliding, calling, "Here I am, Alfred, here I am!" wiping her eyes as she ran.

Gordon Absent
Strains Nerves Looking For Him

The elder Moores were waiting, sitting before the roaring fire in the cottage. David and her husband helped her slip off her wraps. Farnsworth touched her damp hair, gleaming palely in the firelight. "You look like a different girl," he said, "why you're rosy cheeked and blooming!"

It's the good mountain air, and the exercise," the blind old aunt said sweetly, touching Cathie's coldly tingling cheek with a delicate hand.

"Yes, the exercise. A hard climb!"

"And did you climb to the top?"

"Oh, yes," Cathie murmured. But she hardly heard what they were saying to her. She was looking, straining every nerve, waiting for Gordon. Why didn't he come? What made him slip away like that? Now that they loved each other couldn't they be friends even if she was married, even if it must end right there, without even another kiss?

"Well, I must be getting to my bed," old Andrew Moore said.

"Tomorrow's another day," said the blind woman.

"Yes, tomorrow's another day," Gordon's brother David echoed, and he looked at Cathie. Did she intend to sit up all night?

Different
Change Is Noted In Cathie

"Oh, it is late?" Cathie asked brightly. Much too brightly. Her eyes sought the door again. He didn't come. He wasn't going to come.

She walked to the guest cottage with Farnsworth. The altitude and the incline made him puff a little. Sometimes his slowness, his difficult breathing irritated her, but tonight her heart was full of gentleness and pity. She ached to make him happy—she loved him—her mother, way off in San Francisco, Eddie in South America—everybody! Oh, what a gorgeous, glorious mountain night! "Isn't it heavenly?" she cried, squeezing his arm, laying her cheek against his, in one of her sudden, rare caresses. "Did you ever see such a wonderful night?"

"It's pretty foggy and cold," he said judiciously, but she laughed, and skipped along beside him, drinking it in.

At the door of her small neat room, with the camp-cot with the thick, woolly comforters, and the small chest of drawers painted green, Farnsworth stopped to say goodnight. Usually she gave him a little kiss, dutiful, affectionate, daughterly. Tonight she lifted her flushed, happy face and kissed him full on the lips.

Long after she was asleep he lay in his narrow camp cot, thinking about it. It wasn't like Cathie.

Checking Each Trolley Car, Block by Block

DISPATCHER N. S. SLONINGER CHECKING ON EXACT POSITION OF EVERY TROLLEY MOVING ON CERTAIN LINES IN CITY

The great device invented by Pittsburgh Railways Company's general traffic superintendent, Milton W. Cooke. Two years from now every trolley route in the city will be charted on graphs like this: on the ticker tape a complete record of each car's movement is permanently made and on the board over Mr. Sloninger's head lights mark each car's position along its particular route.

SEEK DRIVER IN 2ND AVE. DEATH

2 Children Victims; Machine Goes Over Embankment Crushing Driver Fatally

Two children and four men were dead today as the result of auto accidents over the week end, according to reports to police and the coroner's office.

Martha Canistralo, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Conistralo, of 113 First street, Monessen, died in Monongahela Memorial Hospital of injuries received yesterday in Monessen when she was struck by an auto driven by Arthur Roycroft, of Monessen, police said.

Raymond Owens, 4, of 1240 California avenue, was killed, when he stepped in front of a truck driven by John Greich, 38, of Reedsdale street, near Fulton Street bridge.

Walter Nelson, 50, of 15 Edith place, died in Mercy Hospital of a skull fracture, received when he was struck by an auto at Second avenue and Bates street. The driver is being sought.

John A. Baillie, 59, of Penn avenue, was crushed to death when his machine toppled over an embankment near Rodi, Penn Township.

George Yatsko, 60, of 509 Greenfield avenue, died in McKeesport of injuries received September 7, when he was struck near McKeesport by an automobile, driven by John Mischal, of Sylvania avenue, police said.

Michael Eronko, 23, of Carnegie, was killed when his automobile crashed into an abutment at Sturgeon, near McDonald, according to a police report. He died on the way to a physician's office.

10 JUDGES HEAR CASES TODAY

For the first time in years, 10 Common Pleas courtrooms were busy today, eight with jury trials. These juries were selected in record time from a new panel, all being ready to hear cases within little more than an hour after the panel was listed. Fifteen jurors were excused by Judge Frank P. Patterson, generally for unavoidable business demands. Judge Sylvester J. Snee was transferred from Criminal to Common Pleas Court to prevent any diminution of work through the absence of Judge James B. Drew.

With all available room taken in the Court House, Judge William H. McNaugher was hearing criminal cases in the City-County Building this morning, until the drafting of Judge Snee for Common Pleas duty created a vacancy in Criminal Court.

Heel Spark Held Fatal Blast Cause

DECATUR, Ill., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Rubber heels must be worn hereafter by all employes working in "danger zones" of the A. E. Staley starch manufacturing plant, A. E. Staley, president, hopes in that way to avoid another such explosion as shook the plant Saturday, killing four and severely injuring three others.

Two men were blown through windows. Two score others were slightly injured. A spark from a metal cleat on someone's heel has been suggested as the most likely cause of the explosion.

Bellevue Y. P. U. Selects Officers

The Young People's Union, Bellevue Baptist Church, has elected these officers for the coming year: President, Harry E. Rau; vice president, Katherine Hubert; secretary, Charlotte Taylor; treasurer, Elizabeth Purkiss; group representative, Blanche Biggert.

3 SUICIDES HERE INVESTIGATED

Attaches of the coroner's office today were investigating three suicides reported over the week-end. One man killed himself by hanging, another ended his life, with a gun and, the third leaped from a bridge.

Meri Kyle, 31, of 3628 Frazier street, jumped off the Wilmot Street bridge, Oakland, yesterday, police said.

John Glavan, 41, of Bridgeville, was found hanging in his home Saturday, according to a coroner's report.

Dante Zanon, 65, of 5549 Columbo street, died yesterday of gunshot wound in the head, suffered early Saturday, when he shot himself because of ill health, relatives told police.

New Device to Register Progress of All Cars On Trolley Lines

An electrical device, the "headway recorder" a machine that will designate the position of every car on the Pittsburgh Railways Company system is being developed by its engineers.

It is the invention of Milton W. Cooke, general superintendent of traffic for the company, is the only instrument of its kind in the world, so it is claimed, and when fully developed is expected to greatly facilitate the handling of the company's traffic in all sections.

LOCATION RECORDED

The device is operated electrically. To make the recording of the movement of cars effective, a wire contact is placed on trolley wires in each five minute block. As the trolley strikes the contact on the trolley wire, it automatically registers a dot on the headway recorder, giving the exact position of the car and the time.

Dots are made on lines designating the route, giving the relative position of the car. A red light is shown as the car passes each block. When the car is at the end of the line a white light is observed. If the crew remains beyond the schedule time of leaving the end of the line, that will be recorded, for the machines shows the time the car leaves. Each car will have a time device as an additional check. If a patron complains that "there has been no car for the last 20 minutes" there will be a check on the truth of that statement.

WILL SHOW TIEUPS

The tape on which the operation of cars is shown, moves at the rate of one foot per hour. If there is a tie up at any point, the tape will show it and motor cycle men will be dispatched to the scene to ascertain the cause and repair the trouble.

The headway recorder was first tried on the Brookline, Beechview, Dormont and Mt. Lebanon lines and is now being tried on the Bloomfield, East Liberty, Frankstown avenue and Butler street lines.

It is stated it will take two years to perfect and install the recorder on the entire system.

SUSPECT HELD AFTER CRASH

Arrested in connection with the theft in Rankin of an automobile, which, police said, crashed into two machines in Braddock avenue, North Braddock, Leonard Brown, 33, a Negro, of 291½ Flynn avenue, East Pittsburgh, was held in North Braddock jail today while police continued their search for the driver of the car.

Brown was arrested by Lieut. David Bennett, of East Pittsburgh police.

The stolen automobile, police said, was the property of Thomas Long, of 518 Beach way, Homestead. The owner of one of the damaged cars was Frank B. Schmidt, of 1435 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh. Police reported they were unable to learn the name of the owner of the other machine.

West Wilmerding Man Found Shot

Raymond Houch, 26, of 410 Kinsman avenue, West Wilmerding, today was in a critical condition in Braddock General Hospital with a bullet wound in the left lung. He shot himself in his home last night, say county detectives.

Body Found, Believed M'Keesport Widow's

The body of a woman believed to be that of Mrs. Mary Johnson, 68, of McKeesport, taken from the Monongahela River near Coal Valley, was being held at the morgue today for identification.

Police believe the woman ended her own life by jumping into the river. She had been despondent over the death of her husband, John Johnson, four years ago in a railroad accident.

Class Arranges Bellevue Meeting

The Women's Bible Class, Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church, will meet tomorrow afternoon in the home of Mrs. L. H. Leighton and her sister, Miss Nettie Doebler, 818 Taylor avenue, Avalon. Officers will be chosen. Associate hostesses will be Mrs. C. H. Smith, Mrs. Ida Bly, Mrs. Harry Culver, Mrs. Margaret Mohler, Mrs. Elda Doutt and Mrs. Hattie Moore.

Four Charities Share In $250,000 Estate

Three bequests of $5,000 each in memory of her husband are provided in the will of Mrs. Alberta C. Murdoch, widow of Alexander M. Murdoch, florist, filed for probate today, disposing of personal property valued at $250,000 and realty of unestimated worth. She died September 1 in Portsmouth, N. H.

The memorial gifts are to the Children's Hospital, Industrial Home for Crippled Children and West Penn Hospital. A similar sum is left to the Old Ladies' Home, Wilkinsburg.

These bequests also are listed: $50,000 each to her sister, Mrs. Marie E. McCallan, and a nephew, Jack M. Goodens, Marion, Mass. A niece of her husband, Marguerite Ekas, of Natrona, receives $10,000. A similar sum goes to March C. Murdoch, Berkeley, Cal., and Maud Love, Louisville, Ky., if they can be found, but the will stipulates that not more than $300 each be expended in trying to find them.

Other relatives named beneficiaries are Mrs. Agnes M. Glass, Mrs. Virginia M. Hood and Ethel Murdoch, all of Ingram, $2,000 each; Mrs. Alfred C. Pollock, Jr., Keller Pollock and Carrie Cavitt, each $1,000. The Fidelity Title and Trust Company is named executor.

Club Proposes Licensing Of Auto Mechanics

The Pittsburgh Motor Club, in a letter today to Benjamin G. Eynon, commissioner of motor vehicles, requested that the state bureau consider mandatory examination and licensing of all automobile mechanics as a step in accident prevention.

This action was ordered at a meeting of the Highway Safety committee of the club. Chairman Robert L. Wickline declared many accidents on the highways are caused by the failures of mechanical parts of automobiles recently repaired or adjusted at garages.

He charged that often cars are repaired by inexperienced employes and released to owners in unsafe condition.

Details of Voyage Ready for 'Lucky Girl's' Paris Trip

GET BUSY NOW, WIN ONE OF THESE TRIPS

Gloria Swanson Outdoes Self in Arranging Comforts for Fortunate

As the time approaches for the disclosure of the plans for awarding the Gloria Swanson free trip to Paris and the additional five trips to Bermuda, to be given away by the Sun-Telegraph, more and more details come in about the elaborate arrangements that have been made for the care and entertainment of the six lucky girls who will be awarded these de luxe tours.

Miss Swanson has almost outdone herself in preparing for the comfort and enjoyment of the girl to whom her Paris trip will be awarded.

STARTS IN DECEMBER

This tour will start early in December. The girl selected will go from Pittsburgh to New York City, where she will be the guest of Miss Swanson's representative on a seeing tour, including one of the studios where important talking pictures are made and at which there will be leading motion picture stars on hand to greet the guests.

Gloria Swanson

Incidentally the Pittsburgh girl will join 23 other girls from other cities, who will have been awarded the Paris tours. The trip on the liner Paris and the week in Paris will be so full of entertainment and excitement that it will be long remembered.

The girls who go to Bermuda will have a full day in New York, coming or going, with a complete program of entertainment mapped out in advance.

INSTRUCTION READY

Girls interested in being awarded either the Paris or Bermuda tours will find additional information on the nomination blank in today's Sun-Telegraph. Carefully read every word in this blank and if you are eligible clip the blank and mail it today.

Either today or tomorrow every girl who has submitted a nomination blank will receive by mail full instructions covering the requirements. And when you get these instructions get busy—don't lose any time.

HOLD 3 SLASHED IN FIGHT

Three men, victims of a fight in which knives were brought into play, were being held in Pittsburgh Hospital today on technical charges until police determine who did the cutting.

Joseph Gigliotti, 53, foreman of street cleaners in Edgewood, who said he resides in the Edgewood Borough building, has wounds of the arm and back which required 26 stitches; his cousin, George Perry, 41, also of the Edgewood Borough building, has a cut on his face, and Joe Aiello, 28, of 28 Willing street, Brushton, has a cut on his right arm.

Police said Gigliotti and Perry went to a home in Tioga street, Brushton, where they met Aiello. When they left the house an altercation arose.

PASTORS LAUD DR. SHELTON

Civic and church officials joined with the 1,200 members of Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, last night, in tribute to the pastor, the Rev. Dr. G. W. Shelton, who has completed 20 years' ministry in that church.

Addresses laudatory to Dr. Shelton's pastoral and civic work in Pittsburgh were made by the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr, pastor of Shadyside Presbyterian Church, and moderator of the General Assembly; the Rev. Dr. Edward A. Cully, moderator of Pittsburgh Presbytery; the Rev. Dr. W. I. Wishart, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Pittsburgh; James Rea, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; the Rev. O. E. Gardner, Chattanooga, Tenn., Dr. Shelton's birthplace, and the Rev. Robert E. Lindsay, the pastor's associate.

Cyrus E. Miller, of the church trustees, presented Dr. Shelton with an automobile on behalf of the congregation. Philip Kussart, another trustee, presented him with a pulpit robe. A. S. Moorhead, president of the trustees, presided at a reception at the close of a sermon delivered by the Rev. Dr. William Woodfin, pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church.

Air Victim's Goodby Notes

3 AMERICANS, 3 EUROPEANS ON BOARD

Artists Include Such Men As Matisse and Philpot; Differ Widely on Theory

By PENELOPE REDD

The Carnegie Institute's International Jury has come to town.

Down from "The Pittsburgher" stepped Henri Matisse, Karl Sterrer and Glyn Philpot, all artists in their own lands.

Matisse, the Frenchman, wittily turned away the blunt questions of the interviewer with the remark:

"Even what I sleep well, I am scarcely intelligent, but when I sleep badly, I am idiotic. Last night I slept badly. There is you human interest for you."

Actually, the foreign members of the international jury were immediately concerned with the mundane affairs of breakfast and bath, while the American artists characteristically hastened to begin their work.

CAPTURED BY ADMIRER

Glyn Philpot, the Englishman, in British fashion, was willing to discuss abstract aesthetics with his spare breakfast of tea, honey and roll, but he was captured by a youthful painter who talked and talked of his aspirations.

Perhaps, the patient and genial Philpot remembered his youthful dreams, fulfilled when he won first prize at the International when he was less than 30 years old.

Those who follow the chronology of contemporary art well remember "The Marble Worker," regarded as startling, even radical, when it won first place in the International of 1913. This prize award automatically elevated Philpot, an unknown Englishman, to prestige in world art.

But a short time before Philpot's canvas was being lauded, the paintings of the Parisian Matisse had been booed at their debut in America in what amounted to an outlaw exhibition—the Armory show of 1913 in New York.

And who could have imagined back in 1913 that these two should act as fellow jurors for the 1930 Carnegie International. Other days, others fashions in art. Today, the reserved Philpot is a conservative painter, little known beyond England, while the inscrutable Matisse, as a member of the "Fauves," the self-styled "Wild Beasts" of art, is now converted into the premier social lion in the official zoo.

SUPERB PAINTINGS

Sterrer, the third foreign member of the International Jury, is a superb painter. Likewise, Horatio Walker, who has a long and honorable record in American art.

The other two jurors, Karfiol and Moffett, represent diametrically opposite trends in native painting.

The International Jury is as pretty a blend for experimental results in prize awards as anyone might dare to combine.

WOMAN ARTIST HAILED HERE

Artists are hailing the rise of Mildred F. Schmertz, society woman-artist of Pittsburgh among painters of still life and portraits in the city. And she has gained her fame without sacrificing her home life.

Another feather was added to Miss Schmertz's hat last week with the exhibition at the Elliott studios of a number of her paintings, still life, figure composition, portrait studies.

She works in her studio, on the third floor of her home, 5427 Wilkins avenue, Squirrel Hill. There, amid an artistic surrounding of odds and ends of furniture and pictures picked up here and abroad, some of them handsome antiques, Mrs. Schmertz turns out the portrait studies and still lifes, with her four children, Robert Watson, Jr., Mildred, Gretchen and Jackie, often acting as audience or model.

Mrs. Schmertz graduated from Carnegie Tech, studied under Artist Hugh Breckenridge in Gloucester, Mass., attended the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia. She is a member of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

STUDENTS BACK AT DUQUESNE

The student body today joins the gridders who have been training and playing for alma mater on the Duquesne University campus.

Close to 3,000 men and women students were to resume their studies for the 1930 semester in the nine schools and colleges.

When the evening classes and extension courses have begun next Monday, more than 3,500 students will be in attendance.

There will be more women students enrolled at Duquesne University this year, the school's fourth as a co-educational institution, than ever before.

The women students will be entered in the school of education, school of music, college of arts, school of theater arts and dramatic literature, school of accounts, school of pharmacy, school of science, the law school and pre-medical school.

The library of the university will open again today under the direction of Miss Maria Gertrude Blanchard, university librarian.

3, DENIED RUM, SHOOT MAN

One suspect was under arrest today and two others were being sought in connection with the shooting of John Rutkowski, 41, store proprietor of 860 Carpenter street, who is in Allegheny General Hospital with a bullet wound in his left leg.

The suspect—Stanley Stowinsky, 26, of 437 Penn avenue—denied any knowledge of the shooting, and when he was taken to the hospital by police, Retkowski could not identify him as one of the three men, it was said.

Retkowski said he was in the rear of his store with Joe Similewski, of 1330 Goettman street, when the men entered and demanded liquor. Retkowski told them he did not have any.

As they left, one of the men shot him, he told police.

License plates on the machine had been issued to a resident of Berks County, police said.

Two of the men being sought are known as "Peanuts" and "Red Pepper," of the "Strip" district, according to police.

Squirrel Hill Gets Relief Water Main

A new 12-inch water main, running from Schenley Park, along Beacon street to Shady avenue, was placed in commission Saturday to relieve the water shortage in the Squirrel Hill section, E. G. Lang, director of public works, announced today. Lang said if the new line does not give adequate service, a booster pump will be installed to furnish additional pressure.

Twins Together In Marriage, Bigamy, Jail

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—The Jackson brothers—Herman and Albert—arrived in this world together, got married together, neglected to get divorces together, and now are in jail together.

Being twins, each has a penchant for doing what the other does.

Albert married Bertha Peskind in 1925, and Herman married her friend, Fanny Primack. Each left his wife a year ago.

Last week Bertha called her husband about some support money. A woman answered the telephone, saying she was Mrs. Albert Jackson.

Mrs. Bertha Jackson communicated with the former Fanny Primack, who found, too, that her husband had remarried.

These circumstances led yesterday to the arrest of the twins for bigamy.

STORY OF 'RIDE' HOLDUP SIFTED

John Schweitzer, 40, of Lincoln Place, was being held in Squirrel Hill Police Station today while police investigated his story that three men with whom he was riding in an automobile slugged him and robbed him of $25 near Brown's Bridge. His wounds were dressed in Homestead Hospital.

O. W. Rosensweig, of Library street, McKeesport, took Schweitzer to West Homestead Police Station and told Desk Sergt. P. L. Tierney that he had found the injured man lying in the roadway.

Schweitzer was taken to the hospital by Motorcycle Patrolman Harold Russell, of West Homestead police.

A charge of intoxication was placed against Schweitzer, Squirrel Hill police said.

Tenant Kills Farmer, Self in Cotton Row

WACO, Tex., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Will E. Lowe, 40-year-old farmer, was shot and killed at Watt, 20 miles from here, by his Negro tenant, Sim Knight, 45. Shortly afterward, Knight, who was on his way to give himself up to officers, shot and killed himself to escape capture by a rapidly forming mob. An argument over division of proceeds from the sale of a bale of cotton was said to have been the cause of the shootings.

Man Found Dead In Police Cell

A man believed to be Arch Evans, 40, of 137 Virginia avenue, arrested yesterday at Seventh avenue and Bigelow boulevard, was found dead in his cell early today, according to a police report.

He was found slumped in his cell by a turnkey, and was rushed to the Allegheny General Hospital where he was pronounced dead. An inquest will be held to determine the cause of death.

Camera Question Box

Today's Question: Mr. Rukeyser says "the excitement and joy of business spring in part from uncertainty as to the future." What do you think?

E. D. McDonald

EDGAR D. M'DONALD, Mt. Washington, manager — I think that anticipation is one of the greatest sources of happiness; this is especially true of the radio business.

Miss Grove

JANICE GROVE, North Side, file clerk—Something new comes up every minute of the day. In business one has this to look forward to. It is certain that if it were not for business, the future would be very uncertain.

John Ross

JOHN ROSS, Mt. Lebanon — My joy and excitement in business is to hear the cash register ring. There is no uncertainty about that. Uncertainty may be alright for others, but not for me.

Miss Wieczork

EUGENIA WIECZORK, North Side, student — I don't believe this. It seems to me that the business at hand brings more interest and therefore more joy and excitement than the thoughts of that which is to come.

Sidney Rudolph

SIDNEY RUDOLPH, Squirrel Hill, business manager — I agree with him when he says "in part," but my joy also comes from the excitement of bringing out new and novel styles which are ever changing.

Miss Goetz

CAROLYN GOETZ, Wexford, student—I believe that this is true. A person in business naturally looks toward the future and what it will bring forth. This is indeed a source of joy and excitement.

Husband's Bullet Kills Ambridge Wife

Shot by her husband several months ago, Mrs. Frank Hollien, 38, of Nineteenth street, Ambridge, died yesterday in her home. At the time of the shooting the husband turned the weapon upon himself, and died almost instantly. Mrs. Hollien had been paralyzed since the shooting.

DEDICATE NEW U. P. CHURCH

The new $90,000 Beverly Heights United Presbyterian Church, Washington road and Rockwood avenue, Mt. Lebanon, was dedicated with three impressive services yesterday.

The dedication program will continue throughout the week, with an event each evening until Friday. At yesterday's exercises, A. A. Minotte, building committee chairman, formally presented the keys to Robert N. Grier, president of the board of trustees.

Dr. J. C. Pinkerton, secretary of the board of administration of the United Presbyterian Church, offered the prayer of dedication. Dr. Alfred H. Baldinger, of the First United Presbyterian Church, of Butler, delivered the dedicatory address, and the scripture lesson was read by Dr. W. R. Jamison, retired pastor.

More than 400 persons attended the morning services, and a score of new members were enrolled. The Rev. E. C. McGowan, of the Mt. Lebanon United Presbyterian Church, spoke last night in the new church.

Ship Captain Killed By Fall Into Hold

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Capt. Bjarne Larssen, of Norway, 42-year-old master of the Munson Line steamship Munorway, which docked here early yesterday, was fatally injured in a fall in the hatch of the vessel a few hours later. Members of the crew said the captain apparently had lost his balance.

Woman's Club of Oakmont Programs Give Promise Of Eventful Year

It's a pleasant year the Woman's Club of Oakmont has in prospect if one may gauge from the programs announced in the new year books. A luncheon in the Oakmont Presbyterian Church with Frank C. Harper as the speaker and Mrs. Earl Loomis furnishing the music is to be the inaugural event. The President, Mrs. H. M. Biebel, and the past presidents, will be honor guests on this occasion, which is set for October 16.

Miss Julia Morgan Harding, well-known current events speaker, will address the club on October 28 and November's speakers will be Mrs. Clinton Hale, who is to talk on Child Psychology," and Mrs. Penelope Redd Jones, art critic of the Sun-Telegraph, who will discuss the international art exhibit.

A Victor Herbert program with junior members, families of club members and the Parent-Teacher Association as guests will be the concluding event for 1930, the new year bringing the junior club's entertainment for the seniors and a talk by Judge Sara M. Soffel. In February there is to be a book talk by Miss Sarah Moot, a talk on interior decorations by Mrs. M. M. Redenbaugh, of Horne's; discussion of Morals Court and its problems by Mrs. DeHaven Woodrow, Warden Stanley Ashe's talk on "Prisons and Penitentiaries," a visit from B. S. Joice, superintendent of the School for the Blind, a drama talk by Chester Marvin Wallace, of Carnegie Tech, and one on "Wills and Distribution of Estates," by Attorney Ella Graubart. At the annual meeting in May Estelle Healy Close, gifted soprano and reader, will give the program.

The first event of the season to be given by the Women's Welsh Club will be a musicale this evening in the American Gorsedd rooms, Sixth avenue. The program will be given by Robert Bodycomb, boy soprano; Mrs. Erbin G. Thomas, soprano; Mrs. David B. Jones, of Aliquippa, contralto; Mrs. George Jones and Miss Mabel Jones, who will present duets, and little Olive Jean Bronscombe, reader. Refreshments will be served by the entertainment committee, Mrs. Fred W. Jones, Mrs. W. T. Gwyer, Mrs. Joseph Williams, Mrs. W. H. Williams, Miss Mary J. Harris, Mrs. Eleanor Grier and Miss Jane Davies. Mrs. E. L. Edwards, first vice president of the club, will preside. Mrs. J. B. Jones and Erbin G. Thomas will be the accompanists, while Mrs. J. Harry Jones, second vice president, will lead assembly singing.

Opening Tonight

Pittsburgher In Bridal Party

Weddings in the East during autumn days are attracting ever so many of our young folks from time to time. Many of them are guests at the ceremonies, and others are in bridal parties.

Robert Reed was best man at the wedding Saturday afternoon of Doris Keplinger, daughter of Mrs. Charles Taney Keplinger, of Pondfield road, West Bronxville, and John Duncan McLean, son of Harvey B. McLean, of Brookside Circle, Bronxville. The ceremony took place at 4:30 o'clock in the Bronxville Christ Church.

Mrs. A. Leonard Smith, Jr., Mrs. Delan S. Hanson, Mrs. Thomas F. Remington, Mrs. Charles A. Hoyt, Gertrude Slade and Mrs. Milton V. Wiese, all of Bronxville, were bridesmaids, and Mrs. George S. Reddy, of New Orleans, and Mrs. Walter B. Dudley, of Bronxville, were matrons of honor.

After a motor trip through the White Mountains the McLeans will be at home in Bronxville.

One day last week I told you about the exhibit of the work of Rodin the Junior League will have in its clubrooms in the Clark Building on Thursday for members. And I mentioned that beginning on Friday the exhibit would be open to the public.

Sponsor Exhibit

Now I want to tell you who some of the patrons are. The list includes Mrs. Taylor Allderdice, Edward Duff Balken, the Paul Blocks, the Samuel Harden Churches, Mrs. David L. Gillespie, Mrs. James D. Hailman, the Howard Heinzes, Mrs. B. F. Jones, Jr., Glendenning Keeble, the Frederick Schaefers, Mrs. George E. Shaw, Mrs. William Watson Smith, Mrs. Douglas Stewart.

Other patrons will be the J. Dawson Calleys, Mrs. Charles W. Dahlinger, Homer Saint-Gaudens, Mrs. James H. Lockhart, the Richard Beatty Mellons, the Norman McClintocks, the David Aiken Reeds and Mrs. Winfield K. Shiras.

The week-end brought many interesting weddings, among them that of Mrs. Pauline Bateman Smith, of Cathedral Mansions, and Clarence Van Dyke Tiers, of Oakmont. The marriage took place Saturday with the Rev. Homer C. Renton, of the Oakland Methodist Episcopal Church as officiant. After November 1 the Tierses will be at home in Oakmont.

Autumn Wedding

And while we're on the topic of weddings I want to mention that invitations have been sent for the wedding of Forsyth Patterson, daughter of the Charles F. Pattersons, and George Elder Watson, Jr., son of the George E. Watsons, of New York, which will be an event of Saturday, October 4.

The wedding will take place in the gardens of "Hillborough," the Pattersons' Sewickley place.

Tomorrow Mrs. George Phelps Rose will give a luncheon in her home for Forsyth.

Another wedding that is of interest here will take place some time in October. The bride will be Mrs. Grace Franklin Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Franklin, of New York, and she will marry Robert A. Frank, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Frank, formerly of Sewickley, now of New York. Mr. R. Frank is an archeologist.

* * *

Miss Kathryn Johnston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Johnston, of Bellevue, has chosen Saturday, October 4, as the date for her marriage to E. H. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Johnson, of Bellevue. The ceremony will take place in the parlors of the Bellevue Methodist Episcopal Church at 7:30 o'clock that evening with the Rev. Dr. John B. Magee officiating.

October Bride

Miss Alberta Etzel will be the maid of honor and the bridesmaids will include Miss Elizabeth Gilback, of Dermont, and Miss Helen Johnston, of Detroit. Robert C. McCauley will be the best man and the ushers will include Arthur O. Fisher, of Bellevue, and Donald F. Gearhart, of Wilkinsburg.

There will be a dinner and reception in the Highland Country Club after which Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will leave for a Western trip.

SMART PARISIANS FAVOR PINK SATIN FOR AUTUMN

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The rosy glow of pink satin is again reflected in the mirror of the mode. But pink satin that used to be considered rather the reverse of fashionable is now treated with severe dignity and thereby attains the proper distinction necessary as a passport to the really elegant mode. Shell pink satin is much liked, but we have seen frocks in quite a rose-pink shade. The pink satin frock is often free from all ornamentation, aiming principally for graceful simplicity. It is ideal for the tall, slim woman whether she be brunette or blonde, but should be eschewed by the more mature woman, however much she may yearn for it. For, like everything else, it is generally the fashions for which we yearn that are the least suited for us.

THE EVENING GOWN sketched presents pink satin at its very best. The pink is a delicate shell tone most suitable to a gown that is the essence of grace and dignity. It is from Redfern, a house that combines restraint with the cream of the mode, thus presenting clothes that are very much of the mode and yet entirely individual. This model is quite Greek in feeling as is typified by the draped bodice, which is drawn up over one shoulder from beneath the other arm and knotted there with a loosely falling panel in back. The snug hipline tops a deep circular flounce which touches the floor at sides and back and just clears the instep in front.

VERY DIFFERENT is the other model shown here, with which is a coat designed by Lenief for brisk autumn days. It is of green broadcloth and is combined with beaver. The straight lines of the coat are broken at the top by the matching boleros which curve up slightly at front. A matching green frock in heavy crepe de chine makes an ensemble.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Dr. John Thompson Dorrance, founder, president and sole owner of the Campbell Soup Company, a pioneer in the field of condensed canned foods and reputed to be one of the country's wealthiest men, is dead.

Death came suddenly from a heart attack yesterday at his home, Pomona Farm, Cinnamonson, N. J. He was 57 years old and had been confined to his bed only a few days by a seemingly slight illness. Dr. Dorrance is survived by his widow and five children.

Dr. Dorrance rose from a $7.50-a-week employe in his uncle's fruit and preserve factory to the head of a world-wide business organization. Born in Bristol, Pa., he was graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1895 and two years later won his Ph. D. at the University of Gottingen, Germany. His early career was in chemistry, and while in Germany he conceived the idea of making condensed canned soup available in America.

Returning to this country, he joined his uncle's firm, the Joseph Campbell Fruit and Preserve Company, and in 1899 put out the first canned soup.

The stock of the Campbell company, all of which was owned by Dr. Dorrance, is said to be valued at $150,000,000. He was a director in a number of banks and utility concerns.

DENIES DO-X'S FLIGHT IS OFF

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

(Copyright, 1930, King Features Syd., Inc.)

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Sept. 22.—The trans-Atlantic flight of the Dornier Do-X has not been declared off for this year, Dr. Claude Dornier, designer of the giant air liner, today said:

"I have authorized no announcement that the flight has been postponed. Capt. Christian Christiansen, who will command the Do-X, and who is an experienced sea captain, knows the weather over the Atlantic, and thinks October will not be too late to make the flight."

Dornier said all depended on the trial flights within the next few days. Dornier's newest creation, the flying boat Do-S, also will take the air for the first time this week. It is a miniature Do-X for 27 passengers.

Woman Cellmate Accuser in Theft

Released after she had been arrested for drunkenness, Julia McGeary, 65, of the Monongahela Hotel, was back in her cell at Central Station today on a charge of being a suspicious person.

Police said that when first arrested she had been placed in a cell with Daisy Williamson, being held in connection with the theft of a trunk. After she was released, the Williamson woman complained that her purse was missing. The McGeary woman's second arrest followed.

Nicaragua Chief, Sandino, Wounded

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 22.—Gen. Augustino Sandino, leader of the Nicaraguan insurgents, has been wounded in battle and will be kept out of military operations for some time.

Dr. Pedro Jose Zepeda, his Mexican representative, announces Sandino had been wounded in a fight in the region of El Saraguzco, Nicaragua. The General's wound was said not to be serious, but will keep him out of the field until it is healed.

Tries Suicide, Finds Water Too Cold

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Frank Seidler, tired of life at 31, went down to the lake yesterday to commit suicide, and almost drowned.

He was poised for a leap into the waves, but changed his mind after feeling how cold the water was. He started back along the pier and accidentally fell in. A policeman saved him, for which Seidler expressed deep gratitude.

Chicago Bank Fails, Deposits 6 Millions

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The Lake View State Bank, which has deposits of $6,300,000, was closed for examination today by order of its board of directors. State Auditor Oscar Nelson said steady withdrawal of deposits caused depletion of the bank's reserves. Reorganization plans are under way, he said.

MISS HARD-BOILED

By JANE DIXON

CHAPTER LIX.

The night under the rose arbor marked the end of Raquel's unaccountable surrender of her heart to Gerald Parker. So strong was the control of her will over thought and action that by a single concentrated command her entire attitude toward him changed.

Parker became a mere pawn for the furtherance of her ambitions. Her desires as had other men she had known and put aside when their usefulness was ended.

She never questioned Greta closely about Jerry Parker's desirability from a material standpoint. She had consistently prevented Greta from acquainting her on this point. And Greta would be sure to know his worth in detail.

She surprised Greta the morning after the motor trip into the hills by inquiring:

"Just who is Jerry Parker and—"

"How much," Greta supplemented. "I wondered when you were going to come out of the ether and show some signs of life."

"The affair with Eric Stafford sort of—"

"Slowed you up. It was Greta's habit to furnish a sentence in her own way. "Well, Parker is pretty hot, let me tell you. He comes originally from some hick town in Massachusetts. One of those swanky Boston suburbs. I suppose you know that?"

Wealthy Family

"Yes. He's talked about his home."

"His great-great-grandfather or some old bumbo like that bought up a lot of loose acres with nothing but trees and Indians and things on 'em. Since then the family's stayed put, simply waiting for skyscrapers to chase the Indians off. Now they sell those acres by the carat. Nobody knows how much Jerry's worth."

"He doesn't act the part."

"You mean he's kind of tame. Don't take much to the jazz and the high jinks. I asked Bryce about that. He said the family's kind of nuts on the intellectual stuff. Jerry's old man was a professor of dead languages in Harvard. Taught Greek or what-have-you for fun. Can you beat it?"

"I wonder how he comes to be in a place like Deauville."

"Bryce told me he had a nervous breakdown or something. Probably broke down trying to figure out his income tax. He's here for a complete change. It's our duty, dearie, to see that he gets it."

Alphonse arrived that afternoon.

"I'm glad you've come," Raquel told him. The simple words carried conviction. The long, tapering fingers of the chalky little Frenchman who had been such an important agency in working out her destiny closed over the outstretched hands of "le lis noir." Wise old parrot. Watchful. Waiting.

Irritated by Alphonse

He was sure now that he won her. She wanted to believe so herself. With Alphonse she would be safe.

She would continue her reign on the throne of Beauty as long as she cared to remain. The shadow of the specter, of Mrs. Bosart, gave her a disturbing moment. But that was so far in the future that it could not count. By the time she reached the shadow long before that time, she would be ready to abdicate. Into some beautiful spot where Nature, Art and Beauty combined to drive out the shadows of a setting sun.

She found, though, that one drop of bitter aloes had been mixed into her cup. She felt an active aversion for the touch of Alphonse. She could not have him touch her without a shrinking of flesh—a mental and physical revolt. By sheer effort of will she covered any outward sign of what was taking place within her.

"It will pass," she told herself. "It must."

If only Alphonse would not watch her with his little agate eyes, showering her with their adoration. The persistence of his devotion irritated her. If he would only be more casual in his acceptance of her favor, more the man of the world he was reputed to be, less the calf lover.

Marriage? Madame Courbet!

A little shiver of revulsion ran along her spine. Like a flame along a fuse.

Any romantic interest she might have had in Gerald Parker had been effectually stamped out. She was sure of that much. She might continue to use him as a pleasant companion, an agreeable background for her beauty and her caprice. Except for this, he was definitely out of her life.

The tentacles of Alphonse's intuition reached out to sound the depths of her interest in Parker. For the first time they failed to flash him the correct report. They accepted the dictates of her woman's will without searching into the secret recesses of her woman's heart.

Likes Parker

"She is safe with Parker." Alphonse assured himself. "The exotericisms of her life have possessed her entirely. I have re-created her. She is my creature."

Alphonse liked Parker. A wise young man. A wary young man. Not to be swept off his two firm feet, planted in the plain soil of family tradition and homely Americanism.

Alphonse was not uneasy over the camaraderie existing between Raquel and this frank fellow with the straight gray eyes. He even encouraged it. He was not feeling so fit these days. The candle of his vitality had been burned low by those sleepless nights, those agonizing hours when he thought he had lost Raquel to Stafford.

Rest was what he needed—repose of body and of mind. He must have both if he was to live to the fullest those rapturous hours when he would touch the pinnacle of all life with the woman who was the consummation of all beauty.

If Parker noticed a change in Raquel's attitude toward him, he gave no hint of the discovery.

The days passed swiftly, as is their wont when pleasure is pursued aimlessly and with abundant yield.

Going to Paris

"You know," he told her one morning, when they were frolicking in the ocean that had yielded her up to him that day when she had engaged to struggle with it, "I've been due at the Lido I don't know how long. Have my parking space and everything. Wish some poor devil could be having the benefit of it."

"Why don't you try benefitting from it yourself?" she bantered. Persiflage was the medium between them these days.

"I would," Jerry said, "if you and Greta and Bryce and Alphonse would pack up the kitbags and come along."

"But we like it here," Raquel said, digging up sand like an industrious puppy.

"So do I," said Jerry.

"We shall then relieve you of the responsibility of making up your mind." Raquel said, purposely showering the sand in his direction. "Our holiday is at an end. Alphonse is going on to Carlsbad for the cure. Greta and I return to Paris."

"But," Parker protested, "in the middle of the summer—this heat—impossible."

"Nothing is impossible to Art," laughed Raquel. "The season for the couturiers opens within a few days. We must make our collection for the States. Greta and I wish to lighten the burden for Alphonse. We will do much toward the selection while he is in Carlsbad."

"Are you returning to America?" he asked with what seemed to her to be no more than his accustomed casual politeness.

"I do not know," she said.

She did not add that if she did, it would be as Madame Alphonse Courbet, wife of the most celebrated of fashion's entrepreneurs—the rarest gem in his collection of exotic art.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

Eyebrows are more varied than most of us know. There can be no absolute, definite pattern for arching them. The line that suits a girl with round eyes will look wild and distraught upon the noble forehead of the Sweet Thing whose eyes are slanted or almond shaped. The trouble with weeded eyebrows was that one set was precisely and exactly the same as the next one, giving to the countenance no individuality.

If the complexion rebels against soap as sometimes happens, put it on a cereal diet, give it oatmeal, which is not only cleansing but which soothes and refines the epidermis. Fill the washbowl with warm water, dip in the wash cloth and sprinkle it over with oatmeal. Use the same as soap. Rinse with warm water, then with cold, dry gently and apply cold cream.

Hair that is oily is benefitted by the vinegar rinse. After useing the bath spray, pouring a forceful stream of water on the head, douse the glorious crown into a bowlful of tepid water to which have been added two tablespoonfuls of ordinary cider vinegar. Give a final rinsing with clear cold water. Dry the hair and scalp immediately.

Speaking of the Other Girl to Her a Fatal Error, Says Fay King

By FAY KING

A wise young man does not speak of one girl to another. In the first place, it bores that girl he is with. In the second—if he speaks ill or boastingly of other girls—the girl knows very well he will speak of her like that to other girls!

Some foolish young men think that in speaking lightly of other girls they are proving their power as a sheik, and that it will make them more popular with the girls they are trying to impress.

Nothing makes such a hit with a girl as making her feel she has made you forget every other girl you have ever known. And how can you make her think that if you mention other girls?

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Loves Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Everything Is in Readiness for Early "Get-Away"

I shook my head in emphatic negative to Lillian's terrified question concerning Robert Savarin. If I had needed anything to crystallize my determination to leave the farmhouse at so early an hour the expression on Lillian's face would have met that need. She had done everything in her power for the dying man and had bidden him a last farewell. He was content now in his memory of that parting and knew that he would not see her again. The sooner I got her away from this harrowing experience and gave her back into her husband's care the better for everyone.

"No," I said in an explosive whisper. "Instead he was much stronger late last night, his sister said. She added that he seemed very happy and content. But something else has happened—nobody hurt or ill—but something quite serious—which necessitates our starting at once for the city. Are you equal to the journey?"

She sat up in bed slowly and put a hand to her forehead.

"My head feels queer," she said, "but it naturally would with that stuff you put in the milk to make me sleep. If you don't mind handing me my purse I'll take one of those pellets Dr. Gibbs gave me last summer. Then I'll be down again for 10 minutes. Can you wait for me that long?"

Characteristically, she had asked me no question as to the reason for the journey. But something told me that subconsciously a great load had been lifted from her heart by my decision to return. She had come at the call of duty to gladden the last moments of the man who had loved her so royally, and who once had meant so much to her. But I knew that all of her love now was given to her husband, and guessed how she longed to get back to the shelter of his affection.

"Of course, longer if you like," I told her. "It is five minutes past three now. We are to go downstairs to breakfast at 3:30 and start at four. I'll get everything ready here and help you dress. We have plenty of time. On the way I'll tell you what it's all about. Until we go, the only request I have is that you do not speak above a whisper."

She nodded and I brought the water and stood while she swallowed the pellet and lay back on her pillows with closed eyes. Then I busied myself about the room putting everything in readiness so that when, at the end of 10 minutes, Lillian said she was ready to get up I was able to help her with expedition. At half-past three exactly she, Mary and I stole down the stairs, avoiding the creaking floor board Mrs. Hasbrouck had pointed out, and a few seconds later were seated in the cozy dining room.

We were about half through breakfast when Mr. Hasbrouck opened the door softly and came into the kitchen. He walked up to the table and made me a low bow, sweeping his cap along the floor.

"I have the honor to report, milady," he said, "that your car is on the road in front of the house, all set and rarin' to go."

"But," I said amazed, "we haven't heard a sound."

"No, I know you haven't," he retorted, "for the good reason that there weren't any."

"Then how?" I was frankly puzzled.

He stretched out his arms, flexing his muscles.

"No offense to the size of your car, but I could almost carry one of those things over to Miller's garage," he said. "I put off the brake and shoved it out into the yard and to the edge of the grassy slope to the road. It almost got away from me there, but I managed to set the brake and get on the running board. Then I released the brake and guided it out into the road. It's headed toward Kingston, and the road is downhill for almost a mile from here. When you're all in I'll hop on the running board again, and when you release the emergency you'll begin to coast. You can go for over half a mile. Then I'll get off, wait to see that you're started all right and walk back home in time to see that Johnny upstairs doesn't wake up before we want him to."

"How can I ever thank you?" I asked our big host. "But surely you won't need to go down the road with us," I protested. "If you just give us a push when you start——"

"You won't need one," he retorted. "Your car will begin to roll when you unloose the brake and it won't stop this side of the dam unless you slam on the brake again. But something might go wrong when you attempt to start it—I haven't touched the engine yet, you know, and I'd better be on hand."

"Hush!" said his wife, suddenly putting up her hand. "What's that?"

Along the hall outside came the tread of someone's hurried footsteps.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, September 23

According to the lunar transits dominating this day there is portent of certain devastating circumstances of a nature difficult to predict. There are figures adverse to finances, promising rash and tumultuous conditions and secret and subtle attack and assault as well. But offsetting these baneful auguries a benevolent Jupiter holds sway with Sol, and Venus trine Mars assists.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an interesting and intriguing year with a happening of unpredictable nature, but involving radical and sudden change. Finances will fluctuate, there may be attempts at fraud and treachery, and the disposition will be toward rash, quarrelsome and headstrong moves.

A child born on this day may be clever and ambitious, with many talents, but although being quick, irascible, fiery and headstrong, may also be subtle and intriguing. Its life may fluctuate greatly.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

The Sweet and Low-Down

A man's heart, like a dog's, is forever running off in answer to an imaginary "call of the wild."

You can't flatter a woman in these modern times by telling her that she "doesn't look a day older." What she expects to hear is that she looks at least 10 years younger than she did last season.

The styles are becoming simply a case of a different exposure. For a while we cut a few inches off the bottom of the skirts every year and added them to the sleeves. Now we cut a few inches out of the back of the neck and add them to the bottom of the skirt.

It takes several years of girl-study and then several years of marriage for the average man to discover that a woman's intuition is a seismograph, which registers every tremor and palpitation of his heart no matter where he may be.

* * *

Paying alimony is about as painful to a man as paying the back installments on a suit of clothes that he has already tired of and given to the janitor.

A doctor can always tell just how ill a woman is by the negligee she has on and the way her hair is arranged.

If a girl is pretty enough, a patent smile will pass for a sense of humor; before marriage, but after marriage, she's got to laugh in the right place!

Some women are born for single-blessedness—and like it; a few have it thrust upon them by fate or accident; but most of them acquire it, at great expense, by way of Reno.

After a girl has experienced a few years of the harrowing uncertainties of free-lancing in love she is apt to turn gratefully to the security of marriage and to sign on the dotted line with a cheerful sigh of relief.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Acknowledging the "At Home" Card

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My wife and I have received a wedding announcement and "at home" card from a very good friend of mine. Neither of us is acquainted with the bride, nor is there any great possibility of our ever calling, since they are located on the West coast. I am not clear as to just what procedure is proper in this case and will greatly appreciate your advice. JAMES.

Your friend would, I am sure, be very happy if you would write him a note of congratulations and best wishes, in acknowledgment of the wedding announcement. And of course include in your note your expression of best wishes for your friend's bride.

Evincing Sympathy and Understanding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine, not an especially intimate friend, lost her husband recently, through a long, lingering illness. During his illness I wrote her several letters of cheer, and, of course, at his death wrote a note of sympathy. She has not written me, as she has been settling her affairs and is quite worn out, and I am wondering if it would be proper for me to write her again, or wait until she writes me. BABS.

This would be a most kind thing for you to do, and surely your friend will deeply appreciate your understanding that she has had a shadowed time and a wearing time, with probably few minutes of rest.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When it is awkward for a left-handed person to use a knife with the right hand in the usual manner, is it considered bad form to use the knife with the left hand? K. W.

No; but we always admire the left-handed person who teaches herself or himself to eat with the right hand. And it can quite easily be done, you know.

Household Hints

Protecting Baby

When baby gets to the walking stage and care must be taken about stairs, doors, etc., it is well to put a screen door spring on the kitchen door leading to the cellar. Then it is bound to close after each using and there will be no worry about baby falling down the cellar stairs.

Dangerous Business

No matter how strongly tempted, never cut a roast with a knife slicing toward the hand holding the fork. It is a very good carver whose knife never slips and you will find a good carver never takes this chance, any way.

The Bean Pot

When you have a sticky bean pot to clean, the best way to do it is to drop a teaspoonful of soda into the pot, then fill with boiling water and place in the oven for a couple of hours. This will clean it beautifully without so much effort on your part.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Why Go on With a Mistake When You Know It's a Mistake?

Want to see a picture of a lady two-timing herself? Then cast your optics on this.

It all started simply enough. Mabel was just a poor, deserted wife, trying to get along, and she couldn't afford to buy herself a divorce. So when her Elderly Edgar kindly suggested that two could live more cheaply together than apart, she decided to throw in with him, anyway . . . "till we could get married."

Now she has the divorce, but although Edgar pays all her bills anyway, he "can't afford to support a wife," so he keeps dodging and making excuses to keep clear of the shackles. When he gets real peeved, he even goes so far as to curse her.

So she just sits hopelessly, counting the hangnails "Fate" has handed her, and weeping big, wet tears. . . .

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I am terribly in need of some advice, and I am sure you can help me if you will just listen to my story.

"I am just heartbroken. I am 28 years old, and I am living with a man 20 years older than I am. Don't think I don't love him. I do. That isn't the trouble.

"The trouble is that he doesn't seem to want to marry me now . . . although he was anxious to once. You see when I first met him I was married. My husband had left me, but I wasn't making enough money to get myself a divorce, and I couldn't make him get it because I didn't know where he was. And Edgar wasn't making enough money to pay for it either. At first we planned to wait and get it and be married then. But I lost my job, and so there was nothing for us to do but to get together right then.

"Now I have my divorce, and Edgar's wife has been dead for a long time, so there is no excuse, in my estimation, for us to put off getting married any longer. But he says he is not making enough money to support a wife. He claims that he loves me deeply, and that as soon as he gets some money he is expecting from some project he is trying to put over, he'll marry me.

"But it is so embarrassing for me, for people to know that we are living together. Some know all about it, but the people at the church we attend don't know.

"When I first knew him, three years ago, he was talking about this project of his, and it was supposed to go over soon. So I don't know what to think now.

"I have had my decree for eight months and here things are, still dragging. He makes just about enough for rent and food. Don't you think that is enough to get married on? But he says no, that he 'isn't making enough.' But he is supporting me anyway. It wouldn't cost a cent more if we were married.

"He has a terrible temper and curses me sometimes, and says he wouldn't ever marry me because I'm too jealous. Then he gets in a good humor and says that 'as soon as he has money' he will. I am so discouraged and disheartened! I don't know what to do. I have gone too far to turn back now. My people think we're married, and if the truth came out folks would think I am bad. If I left him, too, I would have to go back to work, and it's so hard for a girl alone to get along.

"What shall I do?

"BROKEN-HEARTED MABEL."

I'll admit that you're in a painful predicament. There is no argument about that. And I'll also admit that breaking loose from this fish-bait you've tangled up with may let you in for a little rough going. But what of it? Can any loneliness or hard work be as bad as the misery you're in now?

And who's actually responsible for that misery, Mabel? I know you think he is. And it is perfectly true that he let you down cruelly when he didn't live up to his bargain. But you are letting yourself down far more cruelly when you cling to him and take his abuse.

He may have loved you once, but it is perfectly plain that he doesn't now, or he would be only too glad to give you the protection of his name. So why torture yourself trying to hang on to him?

Why not do what you should have done in the first place . . . Walk out on him? Deal yourself a new hand. You've made a bad mistake, it is true. But few of us haven't. And if you'll use a little spunk and sense, you can begin a new life and get free of it. The worst part of any mistake is not mending it . . . but going on with it after we know it is a mistake!

So step out, my dear! Leave the town you're in, if you feel you can't face folks there. Square your shoulders and your chin, and strike out for yourself. It may take grit and hustle, but you'll get back your self-respect and be able to look folks in the eye and live regular.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Neglecting Your Eyes Is a Dangerous Habit

Sight is the most important of all your precious senses. What it gives us adds immeasurably to the satisfaction of living. It informs us of the world in which we live, of all its objects, and the doings of our friends.

DR COPELAND

"Myopia," or "near sightedness," is an eye defect that can be overcome only by the wearing of glasses. For years man has tried other means of relief. Massage suction pressure and various exercises have been tried but to no purpose.

In very high degrees of myopia, operative procedure has been used. But in the long run glasses seem to be the only corrective measure worth while.

Persons who are near-sighted are called "myopes." They have exceptionally large eyes. They are so large and so long that the retina, the seeing part of the eye is too far back to receive distinctly the focussed rays of light.

The effect is the same upon vision as though the picture used in the projecting machine of a moving picture theater were too small for the room. The screen is so far away that the images reaching it are blurred and indistinct.

A person afflicted with near-sightedness is never sure of what he sees. He can scarcely make out objects across the room. He fails to recognize his friends on the street.

There is one thing he can do which his far-sighted brother fails to do. It is his only advantage. I refer to the ability of the myope to read the finest type nearby without spectacles.

Occasionally we hear about an elderly person who reads without the aid of glasses. Almost always this is because the myopic eye is well suited for close work. While the distant vision is exceedingly defective, the near vision may be excellent.

Myopia is sometimes progressive, increasing from year to year. Any severe illness may materially aggravate this visual defect.

In the correction of myopia strong concave lenses are used for distant vision. Unless the degree of myopia is very high, no glasses are required for reading.

When there is an excessive amount of near-sightedness it may be necessary to have a second pair of glasses. In such a case the reading glasses are weaker than the distance ones.

Weak concave lenses have the effect of increasing the clearness and definition of distant objects. Things may look somewhat smaller, but at the same time they are far more distinct.

It is important that near-sighted cases are more common in cases of neglect myopia.

Too many persons are careless of their sight. When the wearing of glasses can overcome the evils of eye defect it is strange that so many persons go on from year to year without them. I cannot urge you too strongly to attend to your eyes.

SURPRISE IN STORE FOR PITT'S FOES

IF SOME OF Pitt's football opponents this year attempt to take advantage of the fact that big Jim MacMurdo is no longer at left tackle, and start shooting plays in that direction, they will be in for a surprise, according to the dope of those who have been following the Panther practice sessions. Indeed, it may be more than a surprise. It may be a shock. For when MacMurdo stepped out of the tackle shoes into those of an end he didn't go far from his old position, and his understudy and successor, a very capable husky named Jess Quatse, is playing a whale of a game at the tackle post.

Jess Quatse.

Quatse at tackle and MacMurdo at end are tough men over whom to gain ground. The scrubs found that out some time ago and few plays are now directed off Pitt's left tackle. The two players named represent nearly 400 pounds of brawn, a pair that would make any coach wax enthusiastic. Both are aggressive, agile and football-minded. They come near to being the ideal players Jock Sutherland would wish for if all that a football coach needed were a wishing stone.

THESE PITT HUSKIES may be on their way to the heights scaled by former stars like Chase, Getto, Welch, Donchess and Montgomery—all-America Panthers of the Sutherland regime. Since Jock came back to Pitt from Lafayette to be head coach for his alma mater he has already landed two tackles on the all-American roll in Horse Chase and Mike Getto, and this year Quatse may be a candidate.

As for MacMurdo's chances, Getto, one of Sutherland's all-America products and now assistant coach at Kansas, while visiting at the Stadium during the summer, expressed the opinion that Jim would be Pitt's next all-America player, and Mike further opined that MacMurdo might reach the goal this season, his junior year.

AND LAST YEAR'S all-America end from Pitt, Joe Donchess, also thinks MacMurdo has good prospects. Joe is coaching Jim this season, having been assigned to the Panther ends in his first year as an assistant coach.

Paul Collins.

MacMurdo is quick to learn, and with Donchess to teach him all that an all-America possibility should know, the combination leaves nothing to be desired. Jim certainly has all the physical qualifications—six feet three and a little more than 200 pounds, with plenty of speed to go with it.

JIMMY ROONEY, now nominated to be one of our young statesmen, and only last fall a backfield performer and star kicker in Oakland, predicts a big season for his old team mate, Paul Collins. Rip holds down the end opposite to MacMurdo's, and was a regular on that job last year while Jim was doing tackle duty. Therefore, Collins has a year's lead on MacMurdo in general knowledge of how the position should be played. Rip isn't as big as Jim, but he's big enough, bigger than Donchess, who made the all-America. And Collins is also a whale of an end when he's on his toes and putting out everything he has. If MacMurdo comes through as his boosters predict, and if Collins gets the best out of his system every Saturday, Pitt should have a pair of ends second to none.

IF HE CAN get away with the United States amateur title at Merion this week, Bobby Jones will have achieved a feat never before accomplished by any golfer, and unlikely to be paralleled by any other for a long, long time to come, that of winning all four major championships in one year, but published statements that he already holds all other records in golf are erroneous.

There are three marks that Bobby has not yet passed. Harry Vardon still holds a tie with him in open championship victories, each being credited with seven. While Jones won the United States open four times and the British open three times, Vardon took the British classic six times and the American fixture once. The Georgia marvel can't take the lead there for another year, at least, as no more opens remain to be played in 1930.

JONES ALSO NEEDS one additional United States open to become the record holder in that respect, as his present total of four triumphs has been equaled by Willie Anderson. And Bobby needs two more British opens to surpass Walter Hagen's mark, as Hagen has won that title four times against Jones' three.

So Hagen's performances still stand as the best ever credited to an American player overseas. Also Bobby needs another American amateur to move ahead of Jerry Travers, who, like Jones, won it four times.

Bobby Jones.

THE ATLANTAN WILL surpass Travers in this week's tourney if he can negotiate the fourth and final leg of his big contract by winning at Merion, and his admirers are confident that if he does not withdraw from tournament competition at the end of this season he will eventually beat the other marks he has not yet excelled. The only records not within his reach are those of John Ball, who won the British amateur eight times, and Vardon, who won the British open six times. Jones would have to go abroad annually to have a chance to top those figures, and even then the odds would be against him. In total victories, Bobby leads the field, as his twelve major wins put him one ahead of Walter Hagen, counting the latter's five P. G. A. victories. Jones, of course, cannot compete for P. G. A. honors, but neither can Hagen compete in amateur tourneys. One record held by Jones that has been generally overlooked is that of having won an American championship in each of eight consecutive years. Though he has never won both titles the same year, he has held either the United States open or United States amateur every year since 1923.

THEY MUST HAVE been very nice kidnapers who "held Flint Rhem captive for 36 hours and forced him to drink liquor," for an eye-witness of Rhem's thrilling escape reports that Flint hopes to meet them again. A prominent official of one of the New York baseball clubs says he was descending from an elevated train at 125th street in New York Tuesday night and saw Rhem step from an automobile.

"I never dreamed that Rhem had been abducted, or I would have dashed to his rescue," says the official. "I guess they must have been very kind kidnapers, though, for I saw Rhem shake hands with one of them after leaving the car and distinctly heard him say: 'Well, good-bye, Joe—see you again.'"

ASSURED THAT MAJOR hockey is to remain in Pittsburgh, local fans are awaiting with renewed interest the meeting of the National League to be held next Thursday, at which things will be shaped for the coming season. It is expected that little change will be made in the playing rules, though what is known as the delayed penalty, a Pacific Coast product conceived by the Patrick brothers, is being considered favorably.

Under this regulation it is impossible for a team to be reduced to fewer than four men through penalties. If two members of one

PIRATES MUM ON STATUS OF JEWEL

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—With the publication to lay of a copyrighted story in the Chicago Herald-Examiner that Joe McCarthy is slated to be deposed as manager of the Chicago Cubs for his failure to win the National League pennant after leading most of the way, and will be succeeded by Rogers Hornsby, his second baseman, speculation began as to where Marse Joe will land next year.

Several American League berths were named as possibilities for him, but it is strongly intimated that he will remain in the National League. One report has it that he will succeed Jewel Ens as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

CLUB IS SILENT

Treasurer Sam Dreyfuss, of the Pirates, today refused to discuss reports that Jewel Ens might be let out as manager of the Pirates to make room for Joe McCarthy.

"We will not discuss Ens' status until the present season is out of the way," Dreyfuss said.

Ens will make his last appearance as pilot of the Corsairs here this season in the final game of the home season at Forbes Field tomorrow. He will accompany a team of barnstormers to Cuba and will miss the world series.

Pirate players reaching Pittsburgh from the East today expressed a desire to see Ens back in the saddle again next year.

4,422 RECEIVE PITT TICKETS

A new stage has been reached in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Pitt All-Time Team football contest, the 4,222 winners in which were announced in yesterday's issue.

This morning a staff of mailing clerks began the task of addressing the envelopes which will carry the precious pasteboards to the lucky contestants, 59 of whom guessed the "official" team selected by James J. Long and the others of whom named six or more of the players on the team.

The first of the tickets for the games will be for the opening contest with Waynesburg at the Stadium next Saturday. The fans who won single tickets to this contest numbered 1,072, and, with the 59 season ticket winners, 1,131 in all will be guests of this newspaper.

One hundred and forty-one contestants guessed all but one of the members of the team and thus won two tickets each for the Notre Dame game and 482 guessed nine of the 11 players and won themselves a pair of tickets each to the Carnegie Tech contest. Twelve hundred and nineteen guessed eight of the players correctly and will receive one ticket each to the Notre Dame game, while 1,448 guessed seven of the players and will receive one ticket each to either the Tech or Penn State game.

In all, the 4,422 winners drew down 5,222 tickets, 1,560 of them for the Notre Dame game, the total aggregating $13,810.50 in cash value.

WALKER BOUT OFF

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—(INS.)—The proposed bout between Tommy Loughran and Mickey Walker, the middleweight boxing champion, booked at the Phillies park here the night of October 1 has been called off, it was announced today. The promoters, Bobby Gunnis and Herman Taylor, discovered the date is a Jewish holiday and tried to move the bout to October 2, but that date already had been assigned to the Arena Corporation here for a bout in the Sesqui Stadium.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF SATURDAY: —THOMAS BURLEIGH LIVED EXACTLY A CENTURY—The name of Thomas Burleigh, of Shifnal, England, who lived an exact calender century, emerged twice in the interesting disputes over "when does a new century begin," which agitated the minds of Eighteenth and Nineteenth Century folk. Flammarion, who argued the question with his protagonists, mentioned him in 1900. (La vraie fin du siecle). Prof. Motchnikoff, who is an authority on longevity, claimed to have examined the data, underlying the claim advanced in Burleigh's behalf, and declared himself satisfied with its truth. See "Les Macrobes Monographic," published in 1903.

TOMORROW—WHAT HALF-PINT OF RYE DID.

BUCS READY FOR REDS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Having officiated at the last sad rites in Brooklyn, the Pirates today are relaxing. All the first-string pitchers and several other regulars reached Pittsburgh today. The main body of the team is spending the day at Huntingdon, Pa., for exhibition purposes, but Jewel Ens expects to have his entire club safely sheltered in its Pittsburgh homes before midnight. Yesterday the Bucs beat the Robins, 7 to 6.

The morrow will bring a doubleheader with the fading Reds. A single game with the Howley men Wednesday will ring down the Forbes Field curtain. After this contest, the Buccos will hustle to St. Louis to take on the league leaders.

Denny Southern's circus catch of Babe Herman's near homer in the ninth inning of yesterday's battle in the Flatbush ball yard, was the main topic of conversation among the Buccos last evening. The marvelous spectacle staged by Denny served as the last act of the burial ceremonies in Brooklyn, so far as the 1930 flag was concerned. When the ball left Babe's bat, 15,000 loyal supporters were pretty well convinced that it was a homer with the thrill of victory riding on the clout, but they reckoned without their knowledge of the speed and skill of the former Phil.

The electrifying play was sprung and completed in less than 10 seconds, but one could be writing about it for one hour without doing the subject justice. The catch was good enough to knock the players of both clubs out of their seats, and its stifling effect on the wild-eyed fans cannot be described.

The Pirates carried a two-run lead into the ninth round and Ervin Brame was in a beautiful stride. But with two out and Picinich on second, Gilbert singled to score a run.

The pleadings Babe Herman heard when he came up, belied the fans' resignation as to the loss of the flag. Indeed one would think the flag were at stake. On his

COLLEGE GRID TEAMS PREP

Final preparations for a flock of opening games will be started this afternoon as Pitt, Tech, Wash-Jeff, Westminster, Grove City, Penn State, Bethany and Thiel primp for inaugural contests Saturday.

The way in which Broaddus and Slippery Rock used, or misused West Virginia Wesleyan and Waynesburg in games Saturday may be taken to heart by other clubs who appear to have their opening games "in." West Virginia Wesleyan was held to a scoreless tie by Broaddus, the latter taking advantage of the fact that Cliff Battles was not in the action outfought and outplayed the Bobcats at every stage of the game. Battles was in Pittsburgh Friday night, scouting West Virginia and the Dukes, and the probability is that he was watching Waynesburg take it on the chin Saturday.

Slippery Rock, in downing Waynesburg, gave evidence of having arrived as a factor in tri-state minor college circles. The Teachers will have an opportunity to show their stuff in Pittsburgh this week, meeting Duquesne in a night game at Forbes Field Friday.

Neither Pitt nor Carnegie Tech has much to fear in their opening games. The Tartans go to Buffalo for a game with the University of Buffalo and Pitt remains at home to take on Waynesburg in the Stadium. Buffalo may be tougher than it is credited with being, but hardly figures to extend the potent Skibos to any great degree.

West Virginia will have to put in a hard week of work perfecting its attack and improving the work of its line on the defense. The Mountaineer line was hardly a wonder to behold or a joy forever here Friday night. The Dukes ripped it to pieces, and Wesleyan, up in arms following the tie with Broaddus, and certain to have Battles in the backfield, figures to afford Ira Rodgers' club an afternoon of nothing but trouble.

Wash-Jeff gets ready for Bethany; Grove City preps for Morris Harvey; Thiel prepares for a game with Temple in Philadelphia; Westminster looks forward to the game with Edinboro and Geneva, with the St. Vincent game safely stowed away, must drill for its test with Bucknell.

RICHARDS, KINSEY WIN

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Vincent Richards of New York, and Howard C. Kinsey of San Francisco, won the American professional lawn tennis doubles championship yesterday defeating Karel Koseluh of Czecho-Slovakia, and Roman Najuch of Germany, 6-2, 13-15, 7-5 in the final round.

BULL BROWN BACK

Frank (Bull) Brown, local umpire, is back home from the American Association, where he completed his season's duties yesterday, and will be seen back in the role of a judge at boxing shows this week.

NOYES SECOND WITH 70, EVEN PAR

himself to 32 strokes on the inward nine to score a 70 and range into a temporary lead.

Spectacular approach shots with his spade mashie and brutian putting enabled the youthful Noyes to spring out of the pack.

Young Noyes, former Metropolitan junior champion and twice interscholastic champion, didn't get rightly under way until the turn for home. He was putting indifferently on his way out and lost a stroke to par at each of the sixth and eighth holes, where he took a pair of 5's to reach the half-way mark in 38. Coming back, he sank long putts for birdies at the thirteenth, fifteenth and eighteenth and shot the rest in par, except for the fourteenth, where he missed the green with his approach to take a buzzard 5. His card:

Out... 4 5 3 5 4 5 4 5 3—38
In ... 4 4 4 2 5 3 4 3 3—32—70

OUIMET PLACES THIRD

Francis Ouimet, the old champion, finally wound up in third position with a 73, after shooting sub-par golf to the turn and being even 4's for the next six holes. He finally needed two pars for a 71, but pushed his approach to a trap at the seventeenth and pulled his tee shot into the woods at theh eighteenth, the result in both cases being the conventional penalty. His card:

Out... 4 5 2 5 4 4 4 5 3—35
In ... 4 5 5 3 4 4 4 4 5—38—73

Charles D. (Chuch) Hunter, of Wallingford, Pa., shot himself well up among the leaders with 38-36—74, losing two strokes to par on each half of the layout. His card:

Out... 4 5 3 5 5 4 5 4 3—38
In ... 4 5 4 3 5 5 3 3 4—36—74

Dave Ward, Grand Rapids, Mich. trailed Jones home a few minutes later with a 75. Art Sweet, Chicago, and Fay Coleman, Los Angeles, had 76 each.

The Merion course lost no time taking a heavy toll among the competitors, jeopardizing the qualifying chances of stars such as Jesse Sweetser and Cyril Tolley as well as the rank outsiders in the field of 168 starters.

Scores in the 80's were posted by the dozen as the combination of somewhat soft turf, water hazards, traps and 13 out-of-bounds opportunities exacted penalties.

Dexter Cummings carded a 77, and Lester Bolstad a 79.

Antonio Carrillo, Jr., the lone Cuban entry, shot himself out of the running with a 92, experiencing all sorts of trouble on the incoming nine.

JONES STARTS WELL

Bobby started the round by driving into a trap 80 yards from the first green, but played out without difficulty 20 feet from the pin. His putt was a foot past the cup and he holed an easy par 4.

Bob's drive on the 523-yard second hole was 275 yards in the middle of the fairway. He sent a spoon shot 10 yards from the green. A pitch and run left him 15 feet from the cup and two putts gave him a par 5.

Jones used a No. 2 iron for his tee shot at the 195-yard third and was pin high, but in rough just off the green. He chipped six inches from the cup and scored another par.

The fourth, the longest hole of the course, 595 yards, yielded Bob another par 5, his putt for a birdie from 30 feet missing by one revolution of the ball. Jones' drive was in rough to the left. He played a No. 4 iron to rough on the other side, but pitched on easily. On this hole Stratton was well inside Bobby on his approach.

Jones hit a long drive close to a creek at the fifth and his second was on the green 40 feet from the cup. Again his putt was just a trifle off and he scored a par 4.

BELLEFONTE HAS NEW COACH, FEW VETS

PAUXTIS WELL SUPPLIED WITH HEFTIES

(This is the fourth of an annual series of articles written by [illegible] Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of [illegible] colleges and preparatory schools. The article on St. [illegible] with photos of the boys who will appear in local [illegible] Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

By JESS CARVER
Staff Correspondent

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Sept. 22.—Under a new coach and depending on a squad composed principally of new men, Bellefonte Academy is preparing to push forward on the old gridiron trail with the same zip and fight that has characterized other Bellefonte campaigns.

Jackie Bedell has gone to Hobart College to continue his coaching career after two successful years here and Sylvester Pauxtis brought here from Kingston High Wilkes-Barre has taken his place. Pauxtis, a Warner disciple will employ the system of the veteran Pop Warner, continuing the attack used by Bedell. Pauxtis makes greater use of the forward pass than Warner's system calls for, but otherwise follows closely the dictates of Glenn Scobie.

Veterans are few and far between on the squad of some 40 lads. Capt. Mike Hardy veteran and brilliant end, Bull Manfreda hard-driving halfback, Rosenzweig, also an end, Park, a line candidate, Nevel, a halfback and Duke Ducanis, sturdy fullback star, will form the nucleus of this year's eleven.

NEW MEN BIG BANGY

The newcomer freshmen are hefty chaps. Several up the beam at 200 pounds or better. In height, they range from 5 feet 10 inches to 6 feet.

Hardy stands out as a fixture at one of the ends. Converted from a back into a wing man last year, the powerfully constructed lad performed in fine fashion. He is especially strong on the defense.

Voigt, Stuligaitis, Rosenzweig, brother of Ted at Carnegie Tech, and Fessenden, form the group most likely to be considered when it comes to naming the other wing. Voigt has shown promise in the workouts to date and appears certain to be in for at least the first try at the job.

Beihl, McFadden and Demshar, all weighing 200 pounds or better, Ritter and Webb, not as heavy, but still bulky enough, are tackle bets. Beihl and Demshar figure to get first call at least for the early games. McFadden, if he lives up to his size, should develop into a star of the first magnitude. He is 6 feet 5 inches in height and weighs 215 pounds.

Park, a holdover, Karas, McLean, Rebich, Strojan and Shaffer head the guard list. Shaffer is a crackerjack center, but Coach Pauxtis is figuring on turning him into a guard, where he will be more valuable.

ROTELLI AT CENTER

Rotelli, all-Rhode Island state scholastic center last fall, and a fine looking prospect, has the inside track for the center job, and unless he falls away under expectation, will remain there.

The backfield will be constructed around Ducanis and Nevel, Rosen, Manfreda, Troglione, McWilliams and Loy, halfbacks, and Rhubright, a fullback bet, are in the scrap for positions. Manfreda, who boasts two years of experience, and Nevel are in line for the halfback jobs. Ducanis, a hard-hitting ball carrier and a smart and capable defensive man, will be started at fullback. The quarterback job is open, where a man must be developed for the job.

Bellefonte will play seven and possibly eight games this fall. The season opens Saturday with the Duquesne University freshmen booked for an appearance here. The following week Western Maryland's yearling crew will show its wares in Bellefonte's park. October 11 is open with the chance that the Penn State freshmen may be scheduled.

Bucknell freshmen will be played October 18. Penn's frosh are to entertain the locals in Philadelphia October 25; the Carnegie Tech freshmen will play host to the academy team in Pittsburgh November 1, the annual game with the New York University yearlings will be played Friday, November 7 and Temple's first-year team will close the season here November 22.

FOUR GOLF EVENTS TODAY

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

Four local golf tournaments are in progress today. The Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania is staging a one-day affair at the Oakmont Country Club; professionals are competing for a money purse at the Steubenville, O., municipal links; the Engineers' Club is holding forth at the South Hills Country Club, and the first 18-hole round of the 36-hole club championship of the Hotel, Club and Restaurant Men's Golf Association is being played at Stanton Heights.

Tomorrow an exceptionally large field, made up for the most part of Pittsburghers, opens play in the annual amateur invitation tourney of the Riverside Golf Club, at Cambridge Springs, and the Philadelphia Company stages its annual event at the Wildwood Country Club.

James Ramsay yesterday won the Highland Country Club championship by defeating Joe Royston, Jr., 1 up, in the 36-hole final. Carl H. Schusler retained his title at the Country Club of Pittsburgh by defeating F. E. Bishop, 3 and 2, in the finals. Ramsay succeeds Dr. Joe Stanger at Highland.

TENNES VICTOR

FOX LAKE, Ill., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Horace Tennes, a 17-year-old Chicagoan won the $10,000 Commander Eugene McDonald Trophy, emblematic of the Midwest outboard motor amateur championship, by winning yesterday's heat.

previous trip Babe hit a triple to the deep center field plot and this time he came up to give the rocket both barrels.

HOT SMASH

Luckily for the Pirates, Herman picked a dead-center line for his smash that deserved better treatment. The center plot at Ebbets Field is almost a replica of the same zone at Forbes Field and the orchard in Brooklyn had to be just that big to hold the well-spanked drive within its walls.

The fleet Southern was playing Babe extra deep and when the count worked to three and one, it is just likely that he stole an extra step or two. The effect when Babe struck the ball was the same as though somebody had cracked a whiplash at the plate.

In an instant, Southern was running with his back toward the diamond after the fashion of the one and only Tommy Leach, of 20 years ago. Southern is as good as anybody in the game in going back for a ball, and his action in getting to the right spot was a thing of beauty. He risked serious injury as he reached over his head while flying perilously close to the fence. Then as the ball struck in his grasp, he swerved his body in time to prevent a crash. It was one of the greatest plays any Pirate has made this season.

L. WANER HURT

An injury to Lloyd Waner in the fourth brought Southern into the fight. Lloyd bruised a tendon near his left knee as he scored on an infield play. It was thought at first he was hurt seriously, his mates carrying him off the field, but Dr. Jorgenson, club trainer, was in the Pittsburgh dugout, and, after he had taken Lloyd to the clubhouse, he soon had the injury well in hand. Lloyd should be able to play in a couple of days, the doctor said.

The Pirates brought their last Eastern jaunt to a close with a fine card that showed seven victories against four setbacks. They were beaten 13 games to 9 in the season's play with the Robins, but the Pirates came along well at the finish.

Brame recorded his seventeenth success of the season, and this despite the fact that he was out of action for 10 weeks with sickness.

Brame was opposed by Clark, Luque and Phelps as he carried on to his final triumph.

GREAT SUPPORT

Ervin was given great support. Comorosky's great catches being made only by the circus effort staged by Southern at the finish.

Commy laid on the bleacher rail to rob Bissonette and later he took a hit off Hendrick by a spectacular catch near the infield.

The Pirates won the game in the third and fourth rounds when they scored their total of seven tallies. Clark left during the fourth inning bombardment.

Lloyd Waner came through with a pretty triple in the fourth just before he was injured at the plate. Suhr won a homer in the same inning when his hot liner to center escaped Hendrick, who tried to stop the bounding ball.

UNASSISTED TRIPLE PLAY

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 22.—(AP.)—The 1930 baseball season has sneaked under the wire with an unassisted triple play, one of the game's rarest accomplishments. The feat was achieved yesterday by First Baseman Wood of the Polish National Alliance Club, of South St. Paul, in the Minnesota State amateur tournament.

GRID RULES Interpretations

PLAY NO. 19.

In a game between Indiana University and Butler University, Coach Page, of Indiana, withdraws one of his backfield men shortly after the kickoff in the second half. Near the close of the contest the same player is sent back into the game, and after the substitution has been completed it is discovered that the return was a violation, since he had been withdrawn during the same half.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

The rules provide a change this year for such illegal return to the game. Aside from suspension of the player, Indiana is penalized 25 yards from the spot where the ball is about to be put into play. This is uniform now. Previously the offending team was penalized half the distance to the goal.

ARMOUR COPS $10,000 OPEN

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Tommy Armour, of Detroit, cracked par by an even dozen strokes to triumph over a great brigade of sharpshooters in the 72-hole tussle for the $10,000 St. Louis open golf championship yesterday. Armour dazzled the field with a sensational total of 276 strokes to clinch his victory. Walter Hagen had 278, while Horton Smith, Joe Kirkwood and Al Espinosa finished in a deadlock for third place money with par-breaking 281 totals.

NURMI EASILY WINS

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—(AP.)—Paavo Nurmi, the Flying Finn, easily won the 5,000 meters run at the Nurmi Sport ground yesterday for the Charlottenburg Athletic Club. Nurmi ran the distance in 14 minutes 38 seconds, establishing a new German record.

team are in the detention box and a third is penalized so that only two players remain in addition to the goal tender, the side thus penalized is allowed to put another player on the ice until one of the exiled skaters has served his term and returns to the game. Such substitutions apply only to minor penalties. Another stick wielder is not allowed to serve out an erring player's term on the ice.

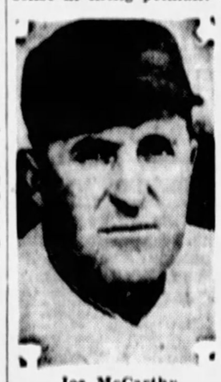
Lester Patrick.

LESTER PATRICK, manager of the New York Rangers, is among those indorsing the proposed change. "I consider it the best thing that could happen," he said. "It was put into the rules out West to save the game from oversealous officials. You know, some nights a referee, for some unaccountable reason, will go mad handing out penalties. And, usually, he picks on one team. That can turn the entire complexion of a game in a few minutes. A team may play brilliant hockey for 55 minutes, and then, in five minutes, through the merging of several penalties, be put to such a disadvantage that the fine work done is wiped out and a defeat is suffered. Six men against three or two is no longer a contest. Naturally, the home crowd likes to see the visitors stripped down to the bone, but it doesn't set so well when the shoe is on the other foot. So the delayed penalty is as fair for one team as the other, and it keeps the competition more even at all times."

TRUE TO THEIR reputation of being poison to pennant contenders, the Pirates just about killed the last remaining hope of another flag seeker when they trimmed the Robins again yesterday, thus cleaning up the Brooklyn series of two games. To make the damage still greater they knocked the Robins into third place and left them only one game above the Giants and fourth place, while the Cubs rose to second position by defeating the Braves. Only a slim mathematical chance remains for any rival to beat out St. Louis for the flag. If the Cubs should win all of their remaining five games, the Cards would be required to win four out of six to finish on top. If Brooklyn wins all of its remaining five games, or Chicago wins four out of five, an even break in six games will keep the Redbirds in first place.

The Pirates have just one mathematical chance to break into the first division, and it is so slim as hardly to be worthy of serious consideration. The Giants would have to lose their remaining three games, or the Robins would have to lose all of their remaining five games, and the Bucs would have to win all of the seven contests they have yet to play. The Rovers could not get better than a tie with Chicago, even if that club should lose all of its games and the Pirates should complete the season without suffering another defeat.

THE ST. LOUIS National League club was thought to be the only one in the majors that could see either justice or common business sense in firing pennant-winning managers, but the apparently well-founded report that Joe McCarthy is to be retired at the close of the present season as skipper of the Chicago Nationals indicates that the owners of the Cubs have adopted the same queer system.



Joe McCarthy.

It is hard to figure how any more could be expected of a manager than McCarthy has delivered. Taking hold of the Bruins in 1926, after they had finished in last place in 1925, he has kept them in the first division ever since.

JOE FINISHED FOURTH in 1926 and 1927, third in 1928, won the pennant last year, is right at the heels of the leaders this fall and probably would have captured the flag again had not injury and even death riddled his forces. In the last two seasons the Chicago club has broken all National League records for attendance and profits. Yet McCarthy is to go. They must be pretty hard to satisfy out there. The reported plan to appoint Rogers Hornsby as McCarthy's successor does not promise to be either popular or successful. Hornsby is certain to be accused of having used the undermining tactics charged against him before, and the fact that he has been publicly quoted as having made disparaging remarks about some of his team mates this year does not augur well for harmonious conditions on the club if he is placed in charge of it. It is safe to say that McCarthy will not be long out of a job if the Chicago chiefs let him get away. The Boston American League club, for one, probably will go after him in a hurry.

MY 50 YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK, MANAGER OF WORLD CHAMPION PHILADELPHIA ATHLETICS

INSTALLMENT NO. 13.

As I look back on my 10 years as a player in the National League, broken by one season defection when I joined the Brotherhood, images of many baseball formidables cross my mind. There were mighty players and mighty clubs. Baseball today well could make room for some of them.

Connie Mack

It is my intention to tell something about the distinguished players and clubs that I competed against and I will divide them into two eras, the first from 1886 to 1890 and the second from 1891 to 1896. That covers my major league playing career and I am appraising only those players I saw in action and fought against and am not discussing those of earlier decades.

Foremost among the players of the '80s was Mike J. Kelly, of "Slide, Kelly, Slide," fame. He was without doubt the trickiest player that ever wore a uniform and one of the original big drawing cards. Fans went to games especially to see what Kelly would do, and he seldom disappointed them.

He could play almost any position. He generally was behind the bat or in the outfield. He made his biggest fame, perhaps, with the White Stockings and Boston.

Kelly was among those who jumped to the Brotherhood, and A. G. Spalding, owner of the Chicago Club, tried to get him back into the National League.

FIRST BASEBALL "BEAUTY"

Spalding offered him $10,000 in cold cash to go back to his club. Kelly was sorely tempted, for he was broke. He asked permission to take a short walk.

He came back in due time, and, turning to Mr. Spalding, exclaimed:

"That money looks very good to me, for I need it, but I can't go back on the boys."

It takes nerve for a man who is broke to turn down such a sum as $10,000, but that is what King Kelly did.

Then he asked Mr. Spalding for a loan of $500, and the latter, admiring his loyalty to the players, gave it to him.

Kelly was the first $10,000 "beauty" in baseball, for, in 1887, the White Stockings sold him to Boston, owned by Messrs. Soden, Conant and Billings, for that amount. A year later, Boston paid a similar amount to Chicago for Pitcher John Clarkson, who was Mike's battery mate.

Thereby Clarkson and Kelly represented an outlay of $20,000 and for many years they held the distinction of being the most expensive players in baseball.

The Giants had some wonderful players in those days in Buck Ewing, never excelled as a catcher; John Montgomery Ward, Jim O'Rourke, Tim Keefe and Welch.

Detroit fans worshipped such stars as Dan Brouthers, Deacon White, Jack Rowe, Ned Hanlon and Richardson.

COMISKEY A PIONEER

Charles Comiskey, now the owner of the Chicago White Sox, made his biggest reputation with the St. Louis Browns, of the American Association, and later manager and played first base for Cincinnati.

Comiskey actually revolutionized first base play. He played a measurable distance from the bag and was the pioneer to teach a pitcher to cover first and take a throw after he stopped a grounder that otherwise would have gone through as a basehit.

Pop Anson, Fred Pfeffer, Ed Williamson and Tommy Burns formed the remarkable White Sox infield that won the plaudits of the nation.

The Phillies had some wonders in Ferguson, Fogarty, Clements and Mulvey.

Radbourne, Morrell, Burdock, Nash, the incomparable King Kelly and Clarkson, his pitcher, were Boston mainstays in this period.

In Pittsburgh, Ed Morris, Jimmy Galvin and Catchers Fred Carroll and Doggy Miller stood out. Washington's early stars were Outfielders Paul Hines and Cliff Carroll; Sadie Houck, shortstop; Gilligan, a catcher, and Dave Force, an infielder.

In giving the names of players in these two periods I am trusting to memory and have not attempted to give the entire number. There is no doubt I have missed numerous competent players whose names belong in it.

KILROY A STAR

Going away from the National League, I must take this opportunity to give due credit to Matt Kilroy, a left-handed pitcher, who won his biggest fame with the Baltimore club of the American Association.

Kilroy had an uncanny knack of picking runners off bases. There was not much base-stealing in games in which Matt pitched, for a baserunner had two things to fear—both the catcher and Kilroy.

In the last half of the '80s the two teams that stood out were the White Stockings and the Detroit team.

Pop Anson, a magical leader and a hard hitter, whose playing career lasted 22 years, or from 1876 to 1897, served as manager in all but the first year and won five pennants. In this period, he had a lifetime batting average of .337. He played in 2,250 games, was at bat 8,947 times, scored 1,665 runs and smashed 3,913 hits.

Detroit's Big Four, consisting of Brouthers, Richardson, Rowe and White, made that team famous. Detroit won the National League pennant in 1887.

With 3,000 fans lining the field, the feature game of the Keystone League, at Bridgemont, found Bridgeville defeating Dunlevy, 3 to 1, in one of the fastest opening day soccer games on record. Penalty kicks played a prominent part in the outcome.

In other games played yesterday, Primrose bumped Curry, 5-3; Castle Shannon Fintex walloped Houston, 6-1, and Manown and Fitz Henry played to a scoreless tie. Gallatin trimmed Gratztown, 5-1; Heidelberg, Jrs. lost to Mollenauers, 4-3; Horning beat Coverdale, 2-0, while Beadling nosed out Bridgemont, 3-2. Castle Shannon Fintex, Jrs., tripped Glendale, 1-0; Mather whipped Elizabeth, 8-0, and Herminie won from Clarksville, 2-1.

MILLVALE CARDS WIN

The Perry Community team suffered defeat at the hands of the Millvale Cardinals yesterday, 13-0.

LOCAL NETMEN OPEN HARVARD CUP PLAY

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

The eighth annual Harvard Cup interscholastic tennis tournament, premier secondary school net event of the district, will swing into action on the University of Pittsburgh rectangles this afternoon. Upwards of 40 youthful racqueteers, bearing the standards of more than a score of public, parochial, and private high and preparatory schools of Allegheny County will join battle for the coveted Cambridge bowl, the total entry, which will not be determined until the list closes definitely at noon today, being expected to exceed in numbers all previous marks since the competition was inaugurated in 1923.

Favored contenders for the Crimson trophy are numerous. Outstanding in the group are the Shady Side stars, Jack Herrmann, winner of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Riverview Park title, and Allison Maxwell; Milton King, scintillant Duquesne University Prep ace, who formerly sported the colors of Kiski; Maurice Saperstein, ex-Bridgeville driver now cavorting for Fifth Avenue, and Bud Leyda, Bellevue protege of Bob Lampus, raptor of the cup in 1927.

ROBINS SLIP, CUBS GAIN

Associated Press.

Only the Chicago Cubs were able to take advantage of the idleness of the league-leading St. Louis Cardinals yesterday in the race for the National League pennant. The Cubs, defeating the Boston Braves 4-2, by virtue of Gabby Hartnett's ninth inning homer, gained a half game and took undisputed possession of second place, 2½ games behind the leaders. Brooklyn's Robins went down to third place as Pittsburgh handed them their fifth straight defeat, 7 to 6. They now are 3½ games behind first place and a game back of the second place Cubs, an almost hopeless post with only five games left on their schedule.

The New York Giants lost all but a mathematical chance of tying St. Louis as they split a doubleheader with Cincinnati, losing the second game, 7-6, after winning the first, 6-4. They remained 4½ games behind the lead, but gained a half game on Brooklyn. The Giants must win all of their remaining three games to attain the mark of 87 victories St. Louis already has reached. The standing of the leaders:

	W.	L.	Pct.	G. B.	Games Left
St. Louis	87	61	.588	...	6
Chicago	85	64	.571	2½	5
Brooklyn	84	65	.564	3½	5
New York	84	67	.556	4½	3

Win or lose today, here's how the leaders will rate tonight:

	Win.	Lose.
St. Louis	.593	.584
Chicago	.573	.567

SIX GRID SYSTEMS

ROCKNE TELLS OF VARIED METHODS

By KNUTE ROCKNE,
Member, All America Board of Football.

There always has been a lot of conversation in football circles regarding systems. What are they? Today football has simmered down very much to about six systems.

Knute Rockne

First there is the Warner system. This involves two wing backs and consists very largely of a crushing power attack by a big plunging fullback along with single and double reverses. The Warner system calls for a big, plunging fullback, a large number two back for blocking and one of the wing backs must have some size. The other wing back who carries the ball on reverse and double reverses may be small. The deception in the Warner attack comes from the half spin. It is a mighty fine attack, particularly when the timing is accurate. It requires big men and lots of practice. It is also effective as a forward pass formation as four of the eligible receivers, the two backs and the two ends, are in a good position to get out into the open.

The second system in wide use is the kicking and passing game from punt formation. This system has been carried on very effectively by such teams as Michigan, Vanderbilt, Missouri, Princeton and others. Their style of game is to keep trying long forward passes and if they don't succeed to kick long and accurately down the field.

SYSTEM ALIKE

The Howard Jones system, which is used by Idaho, Denver and which is also very similar to Dr. Spears' system, consists of a 10-man shift ending up with only one wing back. A wing back is one who lines up just back and outside of the offensive end. Both Howard Jones and Dr. Spears, off this shift, may finish up with about eight varieties of the same formation. This makes their attack very effective.

The fourth system of play which has been quite successful is the man-in-motion used from either close formation or a spread. In the latetr case the flank man is in motion before the ball is snapped. This has been developed very successfully by Stagg at Chicago and Steffen at Carnegie Tech. This system requires expert timing so that the man in motion can turn forward the instant after the ball is snapped. He may block either a tackle or an end or he may go down the field as a pass receiver.

There is a fifth system of play which depends very largely on spread formations. A spread formation, however, is not as effective as it used to be as smart defenses have been built up to meet value with value. However, with a very clever chap back 10 yards behind who can kick, pass and run the formation may still be dangerous.

BASED ON SPEED

The Notre Dame system is based on speed and deception. This is in contrast to the Warner system, which depends on power and deception. Notre Dame shifts just the backfield and two ends. The team can shift into one of eight variations off the same formation. Blocking is entirely a matter of having the proper angle. The main idea of the shift is to place men in position where they get the proper blocking angle on the defensive men. The proposition becomes then more a matter of finesse than of bruising.

Personally, I wish there were more systems of football. I wish more men would branch out into individual lines and construct offenses that are entirely different than those in vogue today. It would add a lot of color and renewed interest.

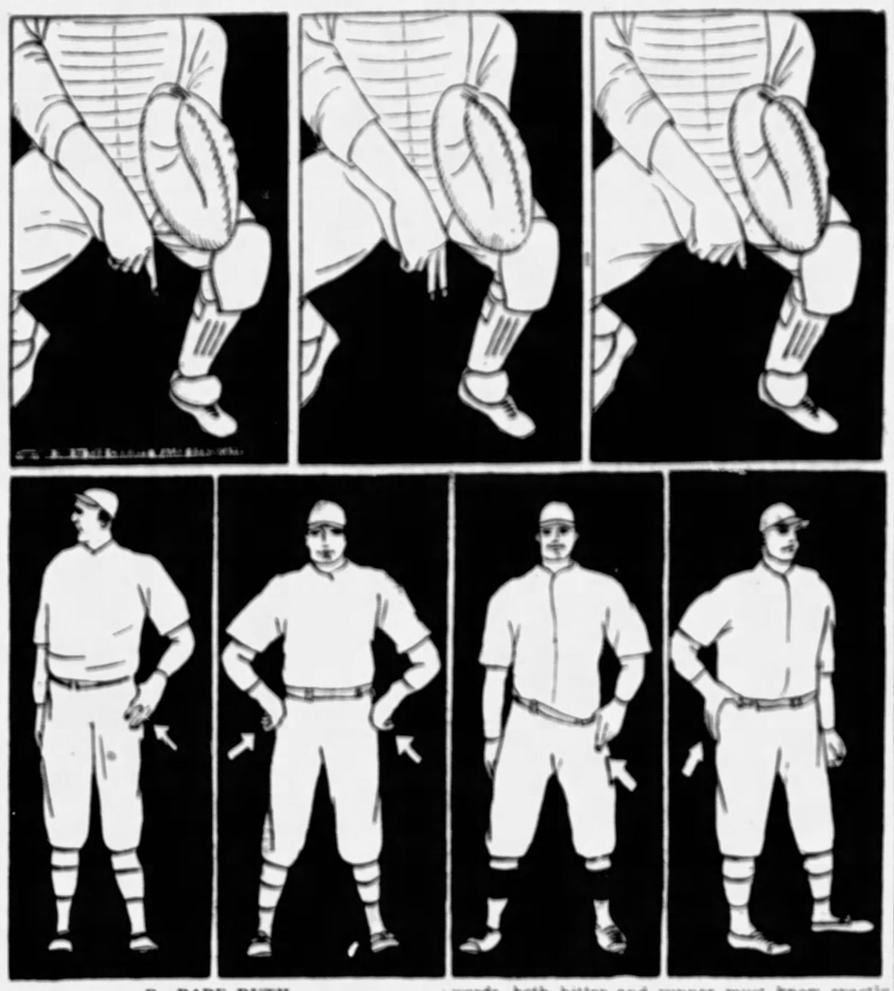
Ruth Outlines Playing Signals For Kid Baseball Teams



By BABE RUTH,
Baseball's Highest Salaried Player.

I've had so many letters asking me to explain a set of coaching signals that can be used by kid ball teams that I've had the artist draw me a set, just by way of winding up this baseball series. Understand, these signals are just examples of how signals are worked. You can work out your own signs in your own way. There are merely suggestions.

In the upper row of pictures you will find a set of signals for catchers. A catcher needs only about three signals for the ordinary ball game. In the first picture (left to right), extending one finger could be taken as the signal for a fast ball; the next one, with two fingers extended, would be the signal for a curve ball, and the third picture, where the four fingers are folded up and only the thumb is extended, means a "waste ball." A "waste" ball, you know, is a pitch wide of the plate used when the catcher thinks a base-runner is about to steal or the hit-and-run play is on.

The lower row of pictures illustrates signals used by the coachers in the coaching boxes—and they are the instructions given the hitter and base-runners so the two can work together.

On plays like the steal, the sacrifice, the hit-and-run and the squeeze play, it is necessary that hitter and base-runner understand each other. In other words, both hitter and runner must know exactly what play is on and on which pitch it is to come.

Now the signals, again reading from left to right, right hand on the hip, fingers extended, might be the signal to sacrifice. Both the hitter and runner can see it and the runner goes down on the pitch knowing that the hitter is going to lay one down. The next picture (both hands on hips) could be used for the "hit-and-run" sign. The third picture (right hand on hip, finger extended) could be the signal for a steal, and the fourth (left hand on hip, thumb hooked in belt) would be the signal to the hitter to wait the pitcher out.

In addition to these signals, the hitter and runner usually have signals between themselves for stealing and "hit and run" so that they will know on exactly which pitch the play is to be made.

These signals, as I explained before, are merely suggestions. Every team can dope out signals of its own, but the thing to remember is don't make them too complicated and don't get too many signs. In the ordinary ball game, the signs I've outlined here will be sufficient. Not many big league ball clubs use more than these—although in the big leagues we usually have five or six sets of signs ready so that if the opposing team gets wise to one set we can switch at once.

HOW'S BUSINESS?

ACTUAL FACTS ON CONDITIONS TODAY

By FRELING FOSTER

1930 Corn, Wheat and Cotton Crops

The 1930 crops of corn, all wheat and cotton, as indicated on September first, are compared with the actual crops of the last four years. These official figures, from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, are conservatively estimated from thousands of monthly reports from U. S. county agents, large planters and growers, and the state departments of agriculture.

CORN CROP

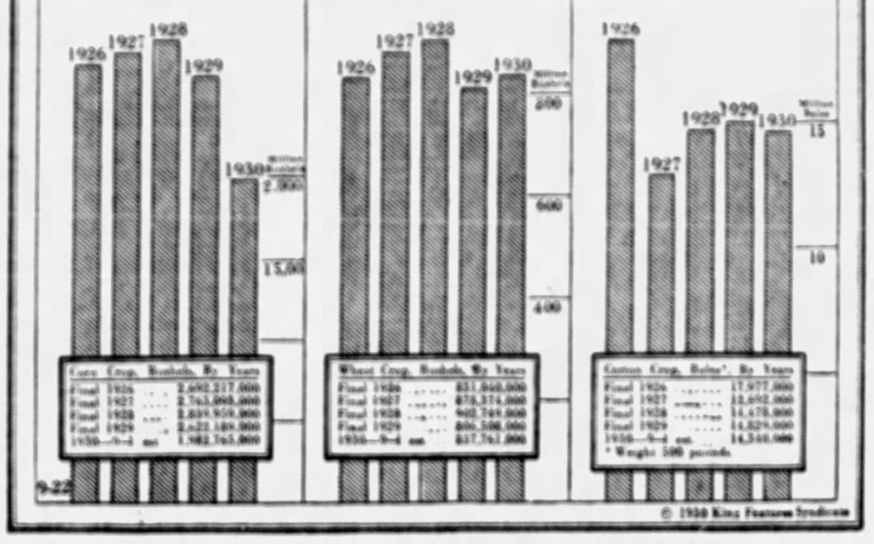
Corn was one of the principal sufferers from the drought. The crop for this year, as estimated on September first, is 10.4% below the August first estimate and 24.4% below the 1929 crop. The shortage is principally in feed crops.

WHEAT CROP

The indicated crop of all wheat—Spring, Durum and Winter—for 1930 was 2% higher on September first than on August first. It is also 3.9% higher than the 1929 crop. Part of this big crop will no doubt be used for live stock feed due to the corn shortage.

COTTON CROP

The cotton crop as estimated on September first was only 1/6 of 1% below the August first estimate, and only 3.3% under the 1929 crop. The 1930 yield per acre is estimated to be 153.2 pounds or only 1.2% under the 1929 yield of 155.0 pounds.



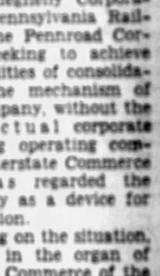
SOUNDBUSINESS URGED TO FIND BETTER TIMES

Mutual Satisfaction to Both Buyer and Seller Shown Most Reliable Principle

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—In times of economic transition like the present, when the buyer has every advantage, there is a disposition to forget that the soundest trade is the one that is mutually satisfactory to buyer and seller.

An anecdote is told about James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, which illustrates the principle. Early in his business career as a salesman Mr. Farrell, in company with three competitive drummers, called on a New England manufacturer. The buyer asked the four steel salesmen to write down their best offers on a slip of paper and put them in his hat.



Mr. Rukeyser.

When the propositions were examined, Mr. Farrell's was the highest, and he did not get the order. But it developed that he alone had properly analyzed the situation, allowed for cost, and a moderate profit. He was beaten by bidders who took the business below cost. Mr. Farrell later learned the firm that received the order lost money, and that the other two competitive bids would have lost money if accepted.

Next year, Mr. Farrell again called on the prospect, and found that none of the other three salesmen wanted the business. He got the order at the sound bid, which he had made the previous year.

Merle Thorpe, editor of the Nation's Business, remarks:

"When American selling regains its old-time courage, then get ready for better times."

Why the deadlock in railroad consolidation, which Congress authorized a decade ago? Finding too much red tape in the conventional ways, the innovating Van Sweringen brothers, of Cleveland, through the Allegheny Corporation and the Pennsylvania Railroad through the Pennroad Corporation are seeking to achieve some of the realities of consolidation through the mechanism of the holding company, without the formality of actual corporate weddings among operating companies. The Interstate Commerce Commission has regarded the holding company as a device for escaping regulation.

In commenting on the situation, Oliver Wesson, in the organ of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, points out:

"While the Interstate Commerce Commission is plainly disconcerted by the escape from its control over consolidations which the rise of the holding companies has effected, there is obvious disposition in railroad and banking circles to accept the reality with a great deal of philosophy. The wholesale national plan of the commission for consolidations has not met with entire favor in those quarters.

"Even people who look for more efficient transport operations at lesser costs to result from consolidation of railroads are inclined to concede that the proper way to the end would be to encourage relatively slow and selective steps toward the final goal. It is argued that the size and scope of new and greater railroads should be determined by the initiative of railroad managements rather than by the notions of a government bureau. Many regard holding companies as logically engaged in experiments with the possibilities. Moreover, in consolidations matters, the Interstate Commerce Commission is dealing with questions of ownership, facing all the time the old adage that possession is nine points of the law.

"A government tribunal that assumes to tell one group of owners to sell and another to buy railroad properties is inviting disregard of its own proposals. Railroad consolidation is now dangerously near stalemate. Rather few railroad men expect it to come out of that chancery unless and until Congress and commission let owners and operators of railroads have wide latitude in which to make progress with merger along the lines of proven advantage to themselves and the national interest."

Change is the only certain factor in Wall Street—and in life. The leaders of today may be laggards tomorrow. Eternal vigilance is the price that must be paid to keep an estate intact. The Standard Statistics Company has concluded a survey which indicates that a stock on the average retains the characteristics which made it high grade for five to 10 years. Accordingly, it is hazardous to buy securities, put them away, and forget about them. On the other hand, needless fussiness is an equally bad habit. Patience should be coupled with an alertness in regard to significant changes in trend.

As long as the Federal Reserve continues its artificially easy money policy, the stock market may be expected to have sizable technical recoveries from each climatic reaction. The ups and downs are caused by a conflict between the opposing forces of cheap money and subnormal business.

Wall Street Not Greatly Interested in Soviet Grain Selling.

Wall street still was not disposed to be greatly interested in recent developments uncovered in the grain market indicating a good deal of selling for Soviet account in that direction. It was pointed out today that our commodity markets are world's markets and as such are likely to be called upon at any time to absorb a good deal in the way of hedge-selling "by the trade." The American cotton market is generally recognized as one of the world's greatest hedging centers, not only by the American trade, but by foreign trade as well. And few doubt that with Chicago occupying the same position in the grain markets of the world, it is forced from time to time to take care of such selling. But these sales must ultimately be covered, and with our high duties, not to mention shipping costs from foreign centers, it is safe to assume that such covering will be done in American wheat sooner or later.

One of the factors which interests in McKeesport Tin Plate Company consider most important for the future of that company is its investment in Metal Package Corporation. McKeesport holds a 76½ per cent interest in that organization. In the first six months of this year, McKeesport's share in the earnings of Metal Package are said to have amounted to $214,000 and for the full 12 months it should be between $500,000 and $600,000. McKeesport Tin Plate stock has been holding better recently than many other issues, because estimates placing earnings at from $9 to $10 a share in the current year have not been altered.

Officials of American Rolling Mill Company state that the works at Middletown, O., operated at 100 per cent of capacity last week. Activities at this place are most representative because of the diversified line of general business which goes to the plant, showing encouragement in the way of conditions prevailing in the steel industry. Officials add that the high rate at the plant was due to the fact that there had been an improvement in specifications each week for the past four weeks practically all consumers seeking prompt delivery. They look for continued gradual improvement during the remainder of the year.

As a result of estimates that the road will earn in the neighborhood of $7 a share this year discussion of the present $10 a share annual dividend of Canadian Pacific Railway has been active. Interests with prominent Canadian connections report that they have investigated the subject in quarters close to the company, and that the view is that the dividend will not be reduced at this time.

Eastman Kodak is being widely recommended as one of the choice issues for purchase during the current market unsettlement. Its excellent earnings record, strong financial position and favorable prospects for further growth are among the numerous factors contributing to its high investment standing. While it is unlikely the current rate of earnings will equal the record figures for 1929, when $10.26 per share was reported, this is primarily due to a slackening in some of the company's lines which are of a luxury nature. To enhance the long term outlook are the prospects for new developments by its research department, many of which are already proving commercially successful.

Quarters close to the company are of the opinion that Canada Dry will close its fiscal year on September 30 with a new earnings record to its credit. In the nine months ended June 30, the company reported net income of $4.64 per share, a decrease of 1.2 per cent from the like period of last year. The final three months, however, normally representing the peak of the company's operations, have already shown more than the necessary increase to top the 1929 showing. Estimates place net for the full year at close to $6 per share, more than sufficient to cover the annual $5 dividend.

Allegheny Steel Net Still Large

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

CONTINUATION OF EARNINGS at a high rate in the face of generally dull business conditions has made it possible for the Allegheny Steel Company to declare three extra dividends of 25 cents a share this year in addition to paying regular monthly dividends of 15 cents a share. The three extras were declared payable April 18, July 18 and October 18 so that the stock may be considered on an annual dividend basis of $2.80 a share.

The company has concentrated its sales and production on highly specialized lines rather than on the more competitive types of steel. This has made a larger margin of profit possible and has partially freed the business from the severe price cutting which commonly takes place during dull periods in the demand for steel.

Products include steel sheets, boiler tubes, steel castings, special alloy bars and sheets and hot pressed work such as freight car journal box lids and spring plates.

Allegheny Metal in Demand

ALLEGHENY METAL, a rust resisting alloy, is one of the recently developed products which has opened new avenues of distribution for the company. This material is sold in various forms including sheets and tubes. It is being used by automobile manufacturers, makers of cooking utensils and of special equipment for hotels and restaurants. New outlets are also being secured in many lines where metals are exposed to corrosive influences.

In the three months ended June 30, 1930, the first quarterly period for which an income account has been published, the company earned $667,905 after all charges. This was equivalent to 99 cents a share on 610,541 shares of common stock after deducting preferred dividends.

Dividends Earned

THE LOW RATE of automobile production and other influences have retarded sales during the past summer. In spite of this, however, the company is expected to have earned its regular and extra dividend requirements for an entire year in the first nine months of 1930.

For the full year profits will be lower than in 1929, but the decline will be small in comparison to that of most other steel companies. Last year net profit was $3,311,492 or $5.04 a share on 610,026 common shares. This compared with $2,193,235 or $7.32 a share on 268,485 common shares in 1928.

The increase in the common stock was caused by a stock dividend of 100 per cent paid in February, 1929, and by the acquisition of the West Penn Steel Company in May, 1929.

No Funded Debt

THE COMPANY HAS NO funded debt. The issue of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock amounts to only $3,342,600. Physical properties were carried at $18,279,530 against which a depreciation reserve of $5,584,255 has been established.

The organization has an enviable financial position. At the close of 1929 current assets of $11,417,608 were 4.7 times current liabilities. Cash and marketable securities totaled $5,265,063. These were more than twice current liabilities of $2,414,374.

While patents, patterns and good will undoubtedly have a large actual value, they are carried on the balance sheet at only $1. With total assets of $30,559,518 at the end of 1929, surplus of $15,023,039 was nearly half this amount.

Phelps Dodge O.K.'S Change of Capital

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Stockholders of Phelps Dodge Corporation have voted an increase in capital stock to 3,000,000 shares from 2,000,000 shares. One of the purposes of the increase in stock is to provide for exchange of Phelps Dodge shares for those of the Nichols Copper Company on a share-for-share basis, requiring 222,000 shares if all Nichols stock is exchanged.

Holders of a majority of shares of Nichols Couper Company have signified their intention of making the exchange.

GRID ELEVENS WARM UP

By TOM BIRKS.

Next Sunday finds the Western Pennsylvania independent gridiron conference swinging into action for the first time, with all six clubs scheduled.

At Burns, the Hope-Harvey Majestics will help Jimmy Smith inaugurate his home season. At West View, the crack McKeesport Olympics will play to one of the greatest crowds in the history of the sandlot sport. The other game will find the Big Red McChesneytown machine hooking up with East Pittsburgh at the Quarry grounds.

In-and-out football marked the final warmup games of the conference contenders yesterday. The McKeesport Olympics rode roughshod over the Valley All-Stars, 45 to 0. West View just nosed out the Pleasant Valley Smilers, 10 to 0, Stanley Berkman scoring the touchdown. Christy Park defeated McChesneytown, 7 to 6.

In other battles yesterday the Ambridge Mystics beat the Library Tigers, 19-0; Oakmont's Panthers lost to the Glendale Tigers, 7-0; Rox Rangers whipped Penn A. A., 25-0; Corpus Christi nosed out Primrose, 7-0, and Arnold Indies topped Oakmont-Verona, 9-0.

MEADVILLE WINS, 27-0

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 21.—Meadville High, for three years district champion, opened the season here yesterday by defeating Union City, 27 to 0. The Red and Black scored one touchdown in each period.

Sport Vignettes

Judging from the early-season football scores, they've taken the lively ball out of the game. . . . For example, West Virginia 7, Duquesne 0; West Virginia Wesleyan 0, Broaddus 0, and Slippery Rock 7, Waynesburg 0. . . . Joe Dasher, secretary to the Polish consul here, is getting all pepped up for Carnegie Tech's season, as usual. . . . And Bobby Jones is at Merion for the National Amateur, beginning today, reports to the contrary notwithstanding. . . . Josh Williams, Pitt ½ back, thought he was on the night trick when Backfield Coach Andy Gustafson got all of the Pitt ½ backs out for an extra session of forward-passing following a recent drill at Camp Hamilton.

Report has it that the reason Barney Dreyfuss at first kicked on that Cuban trip for some of his players was because Cuba isn't far enough away. . . . Woddyamean, National League "race?" . . . Perhaps you know someone who didn't win a prize in the Sun-Telegraph's wow football contest, just completed? . . . Strange as it may seem, they are giving the manager some of the credit for the pennant drive of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jack Sharkey says he'll quit the ring when he becomes a millionaire. What he probably means is when he acquires that second million. . . . The former gob is getting another $100,000 for his bout with Victorio Campolo, the Italian from the Argentine, at the Yankee Stadium, next Thursday night. . . . Campolo has had only 16 fights, but has turned in 11 knockout triumphs. . . . He lost on a technical knockout to Monte Munn when an eye was badly cut and lost a decision to Phil Scott and lost and drew with Johnny Risko. . . . Tom Heeney is among his knockout victims. . . . The Navy and Marine Memorial Fund hopes to realize $50,000 from the Sharkey-Campolo fight to complete the $500,000 it needs for the erection of a memorial in Washington, the fund having been begun five years ago and brought along to its present stage by contributions from wealthy persons and school children all over the land.

Did you know that Campolo stands 6 feet 6½ inches in his socks and weighs around 220 pounds and will have 25 pounds and about a half-foot in height and reach on Sharkey, the American champion? . . . . . Lou Fink, his trainer, who also trained Gene Tunney, is on record as saying that Campolo will shock the cock-eyed world by taking Sharkey into camp.

* * *

Tommy Heeney and Johnny Risko, both of whom have fought both Campolo and Sharkey, also pick Campolo to win, although that may be mere ballyhooey to help along the gate. . . . Another veteran who strings along with Campolo is Mike McTigue, who boxed Sharkey and lost on a technical knockout when his mouth was cut in a great fight. Michael never did have a lot of respect for Sharkey's ability and thinks any up-and-coming fellow like Campolo has a great chance to beat Jack, who, he says, is slipping badly. . . . Top price for the Sharkey-Campolo fight, by the way, is $15.75, with the general admissions going at $2.10.—HARRY KECK.

MARKET COURSE AGAIN POINTS DOWNWARD

Some Important Shares, Including Steel, React To Loss for Movement

Delaware and Hudson, Case and Worthington, Public Service and Allied Chemical & Dye, Peoples Gas, American Can and General Electric sagged about a point. New lows for the year were made in International Telephone, United Fruit, Republic Steel, Calumet and Hecla and St. Louis Southwestern.

EXPECTED RALLY

Failure of the market to make an appreciable recovery last Saturday caused considerable discouragement in those which had been hoping for a technical rally of some proportions based on the assumption that the short interest had been well extended since the current decline started from the post-June price peak around September 10.

Although real liquidation was relatively light in the decline late last week, some traders held to the opinion that a sizeable volume of stock was waiting sale should the market make and maintain an advance behind the highs of late summer.

Secretary Lamont's statement on business called attention to some favorable aspects of the current situation. The head of the Commerce Department said the government's indices on business showed that the marked decline had ceased and that there were "some distinctly encouraging features," including the gain in August exports.

GAIN INDICATED

Preliminary figures on retail trade, he said, indicated a gain larger than is usual at this season. Mr. Lamont also confirmed reports that large industries were making commitments in raw materials.

Scattering announcements from the steel centers revealed that that industry was at least holding its own as the new week opened. Operations in the Youngstown area remain unchanged. Republic Steel reported a 17 per cent increase in orders for the first three weeks of September over the same August interval. One U. S. Steel subsidiary was said to be operating at the best ratio in 10 years, while Otis Steel is stepping up its sheet and strip production.

Money was easy and plentiful. Call funds renewed at 2 per cent.

Van Swearingen O.K. For Western Berth

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized O. P. Van Sweringen to act as a director of the Trans-Missouri Terminal Company, an affiliate of the Missouri Pacific Railroad. Other associates of Mr. Van Sweringen also were permitted to occupy similar positions.

Joseph R. Nutt, of Cleveland, was permitted to become a director on the Cleveland Youngstown Railroad.

Wheat Production Up in 30 Countries

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—Wheat production in 1930 in 30 Northern Hemisphere countries is reported at 2,799,189,000 bushels, an increase of 5.8 per cent over the production of the same countries in 1929, stated the Department of Agriculture.

Rye production for 1930 in 20 European countries is estimated at 864,511,000 bushels, a decrease of 3.2 per cent from 1929.

Majestic Making 1,000 Icers a Day

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—The Majestic Household Utilities Corp. has advised distributors and dealers that beginning today production of refrigerators will be 1,000 per day and prices are $175 and $195.

Otis Steel to Add Another Furnace

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Otis Steel Company is increasing its output of sheets and strips. The company added four open hearth furnaces during the last two weeks with a fifth to be placed in operation this week.

Receiver Named For Ohio Utility

CLEVELAND, Sept. 22.—[illegible] Day has been named receiver for the Utilities Service Company of Ohio which operates public utilities and ice companies in 45 Ohio cities.

The receivership suit was brought by the bondholders committee which the company failed to pay interest on the 6 per cent debenture bonds on February 1 and August 1 of the current year.

The receivership was agreed to by Curtis M. Shelton of Canton attorney for the company. The company will continue to operate.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—With a thorough investigation scheduled to begin this week into alleged sabotage methods of Russian government grain dealings here, wheat prices averaged lower early today. The main immediate market factors were reports of rain in Argentina, where absence of moisture has been arousing anxiety over prospective crop damage. Nearly 2,000,000-bushel increase of the amount of wheat on ocean passage was also noted. Starting unchanged to ½c off, wheat afterward rallied but then sagged all around to well below Saturday's finish. Corn started ½-¾c down and subsequently held near to the initial range.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Cotton opened steady today at a decline of 3 points to an advance of 1 point, generally lower under southern selling and further scattering liquidation. There was some buying on the relatively steady showing of Liverpool, and trade buying was also in evidence and the early offerings were absorbed within a comparatively narrow range with the market holding about steady at net declines of 2 to 4 points at the end of the first half hour.

After selling at 10.98 the new December eased off to 10.94 while March declined to 11.21, compared with 11.26 at the close of Saturday.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP)—A new week brought no change in the trend of Curb stocks today. The market opened lower and while support appeared at slightly lower levels for the bulk of the list rallies on recession were quickly checked by further offerings and the market displayed a heavy tone. Trading was fairly brisk during the morning but slowed down around midday.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Following is the list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange giving all stocks and bonds traded (00 omitted in sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list).

Building Record in South For Eight Months Gains

Total Nearly Equal Last Year's Financial Advertising Appeal

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

IN EIGHT MONTHS this year building throughout the South has nearly equaled that for the whole of last year. There's a moral in that for you.

THE FINANCIAL ADVERTISERS Association has been wonderfully coming here in Louisville. I cherished the very earnest hope for the public's attitude toward investing it holds the friendly [illegible] Last year's gains have [illegible] Dazed.

The wide award to tell what investors enjoy from investment advertising condensed much personal financial advertising [illegible] offerings of securities for sale—as having had its birth [illegible] the old days and never given up. It was produced [illegible] and bankers and lawyers [illegible] with technical legalistic artificial expressions understood by the bankers themselves and some of the relatively few wealthy individuals who then did their own investing. The appeal then was mostly to the trade to the professional [illegible] brokers, custodians of estates, savings banks.

Today the appeal though meant to be [illegible] the millions is still couched in language understood by [illegible] dealers—or some of them, but not certainly not understood by the millions.

A plea therefore was made for adapting financial advertising keyed to today's tempo to today's broad market to the ordinary mortals whose money is desired. In very lucid fram simple convincing advertising that he who runs may not only read but understand.

Hereafter all financial advertising should be written not by lawyers or technically trained financial officers but by advertising men. Let the lawyers emphasize in the briefs content in supplementary circulars if need be a few of these might be wanted by the trade but they would not fill the bill for the public.

Then what would you think of a department store that at the bottom of each of its advertisements printed this warning:

"We accept no responsibility for the soundness of the goods here advertised and refuse to stand back of them. No comebacks."

That is what merchants putting out investment goods do.

Imagine what would happen to a manufacturer who disclaimed all responsibility for the quality of his product! Would you be eager to buy it? Even a thirteenth-rate corner grocery store will return your money if you take back a can of rotten tomatoes it has sold you.

How soon will underwriters have the courage—and the business sense—to come out and declare without quibbling or hedging:

"We have investigated every statement here made and guarantee its accuracy."

Yes, there is room for much modernizing, much improving of investment and financial advertising. Big developments are near. Even the New York Stock Exchange will find it imperative by and by to move into line with modern conditions. Its advertising ideas belong to the dark ages.

TO RETURN after that long-winded excursion to the constructivity in the South, read this editorial from the Louisville Herald-Post:

"The manufacturer's record sets out with great detail the mounting construction record of the South. During the months of June, July and August this reaches the startling figure of more than $300,000,000 which is $43,000,000 more than the previous total for that period. In eight months alone the construction work in the South mounts in 1930 to very nearly as much as in the whole of 1919.

"Scanning the horizon to assay the probable trend of business in the South it is encouraging to estimate that there will be released for wage earners a whole flood of government and public utility construction. This will eventually be expressed in pay envelopes. This is perhaps the surest promise of returning prosperity now in sight."

James B. Brown, owner of the Herald Post, president of the National Bank of Kentucky, "oldest and largest bank in the oldest state west of the Alleghenies," Louisville's most dynamic entrepreneur and a towering figure in the state politically as well as financially and industrially, talked with me in a hopeful, optimistic vein—very different from the tone prevailing in Wall Street at the moment. He declared:

"The drought has been greatly exaggerated. Its effects have been pictured as totally disastrous. We in this part of the country will come through all right."

DID YOU EVER hear of the Louisville industrial foundation? How it is building up the city is worth telling in a later column.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK Sept 22—Heavy selling of German International Bonds was resulted in the bond market today to depress the issue to a new low since it was offered last spring. The bonds were offered at 80 and on the day's movement sold about 10 points under that figure.

DAILY TRUE STORY

"Well, Well!"

"What you need," said Dr. Luther, "is a year out in Arizona, living in a cabin and just loafing about."

"What I need," thought Joe Thatcher, "is about ten thousand dollars." To the doctor he said:

"Arizona eh? And the next best thing——"

"There isn't any next best thing Mr Thatcher."

"Trying to throw a scare into me, Doc? How about Cobb's Hill up in Westmoreland? I happen to own a dozen acres there that my grandfather left me."

"Arizona and the dry and hot sun is better but if you go up in the Westmoreland heights you will have to keep moderately active to make up for the hot sun."

"Well building a cottage and keeping chickens and grubbing to get a living there ought to keep me active—or starved."

Dr Luther was somewhat surprised.

"Sorry—I had an idea that you were financially well fixed—Westmoreland heights will serve if you do as you said."

"I've got money—it's all tied up and will be for some five years and if I dispose of my holdings now I will lose half of it—I'm off for a mountain farm or a hill." Joe told him.

Joe hadn't been out to Westmoreland since he was a boy of 15. He used to camp on Cobb's Hill near a spring at the top. When his grandfather passed on, the farm was sold and Joe's proceeds went into an investment because Joe was a minor then, but the dozen acres at the top of Cobb's Hill went directly to Joe. Old Grandfather Cobb didn't forget the fun his daughter's boy had camping out up there.

Stubborn Woman

The sight of what had been his grandfather's house displeased him. Whoever had bought it had rebuilt it entirely, plastered it with stucco, topped it with green tiles made formal gardens about it and ornately fenced it in.

Joe opened the lower gate to drive through the pasture up on the hill.

A man servant came out and ordered him off.

"But I'm not doing any harm," Joe said, "and I have to get up to the top of the hill as that is my property."

"I'll see," said the man.

He came back shortly after this.

"Sorry, but Mrs Warren says she cannot permit trespassing. There is no right of way over her property. She will buy the hill property from you, however. She wants you to name your price."

"Tell her," Joe said, "that I am out here on doctor's orders, that I won't hurt her pasture driving up the old road and that my hill isn't for sale. Tell her my grandfather originally owned this place."

Again the man went. Again he came back.

"Mrs. Warren says that she is not interested in your ancestors, that this is private property and you cannot pass through. She also says for you to name your price and she will pay you at once for the hill."

"Tell Mrs. Warren," Joe said, losing his temper, "that Mr. Thatcher pays his compliments to such a sweet and generous lady—accent the 'lady'—and tell her she knows where she may go!"

Joe backed his car out, closed the gate and drove a mile and a half around the valley road to an old wood road he knew about which led to his hill property.

It was a rough road. It made the trip to the village two miles further. Joe was mighty sore about it and kept the thought in the back of his head that some day he would find a means of getting square with the snooty Mrs. Warren, whoever she might be. He wished he could have got a glimpse of her. Evidently she was hidden back of a curtain, staring out at him.

In his old clothes and battered car—he sold his good car—he did look rather disreputable.

Meanwhile he found that he was having a lot of fun while getting his hilltop "estate" built. He slept in a tent, had lumber hauled up at an added expense because of the roundabout rough road, and started working. He hired an assistant for the heavy work.

Health Improves

Joe was putting all of his ready cash into this. He had to make good then or forage for eats.

Luck seemed to be with him in many ways. He was already getting better. The thousand hens he had bought and installed in the hen houses he had built first were producing quantities of eggs which he sold at a good profit.

His cottage, painted white and trimmed with green, was quite an attractive landmark. He kept busy from sunrise to dark out of doors. Friends sent quantities of plants. He had a good vegetable garden. His incubator house was producing profitable broilers—everything would be lovely if he didn't have to make that awful detour up over a rocky road.

Mrs. Warren's servant came up the last of June, just as the cottage and the neat poultry houses were finished and Joe's garden was lush with young vegetable plants, or ablaze with flowers.

"This," Joe said, recognizing the man, "is private property. Get off!"

"But, sir, Mrs. Warren sent me on a message."

"If the message is for me, tell her to bring it up herself!"

"But, sir, she couldn't do that, you know."

"Have I got to run you off my property?"

The man departed.

In a few days a letter came. Joe drove twice a week to the village. The letter was from a firm of city lawyers offering him fully five times what his property was worth.

Mrs Warren's name wasn't mentioned but Joe knew she was making the offer. He scrawled with a big red pencil across the neatly typed letter:

Tell Mrs. Warren that my property is not for sale to her!

July came and there was considerable of a drought! Joe had walled in the full spring, installed a small power plant to light his place and pump water. The spring never ran dry, although he could have used a little more water than it afforded.

It was in June that Joe found a note pinned on his door. It read:

Mrs Warren complains that the noise from your poultry farm is unbearable. Unless you do away with your poultry she will have to take action through the board of health.

Idea Materializes

It bore her lawyer's name.

Joe wrote right back:

Hop to it my dear Mrs Warren.

She did try it. A court case was threatened. It was absurd and Joe knew it. Doubtless Mrs Warren's lawyers knew it, for the threatened case didn't seem to materialize.

And then Joe, who was something of an expert in geology, had a brilliant idea. He remembered that Grandfather Cobb had told him that his own wonderful well of water was supplied from the same underground veins of water that fed the hill spring.

This had the desired effect.

Mrs Warren's well dried up!

Joe started to dig a well. He was strong and husky by this time. He dug a very deep well, a very large well and he walled it beautifully, so that it went down a full 20 feet below the water veins with a diameter of 10 feet. It was more like a giant cistern than a well.

Oh yes, I had to dig a well to supply my poultry, he explained.

More letters and Mrs Warren's lawyers discovered that all she could do about it was to admit that it was hard luck. So long as a well doesn't endanger life by being full of bad water one may dig it on his property.

Joe came back from the village one afternoon late in August. The drought had continued but he had plenty of water for everything. His lawn was green, his flowers were glorious and his vegetables were perfection. His poultry farm paid a big profit. Joe was healthy and happy—except for that one bitterness, being unable to drive up the pasture road straight to his property.

A girl was sitting under the pine tree in Joe's rustic easy chair. She was reading a book and smoking. Her fluffy yellow hair was down to her shoulders, her khaki shirt was open low at the throat. Her riding breeches and leggins showed rough usage.

"Well, little girl—are you lost?" Joe called out.

He hopped out of the car. He was tall and bronzed and all in white. He treated himself to being dressed up twice a week, when he drove to the village.

"I wish to see Mr Thatcher," she answered, smiling at him.

"All right, little girl, take a look—no charge," and Joe smiled back at her.

"But—but you aren't the Mr. Thatcher who owns this place," she declared.

"If I'm not, I've been fooling myself right along. I'm Joe Thatcher—what did you want?"

The girl smiled and then she frowned.

Meets Mrs. Warren

"I am Mrs Warren," she said, rather meekly.

"The devil you are! Excuse me—but you couldn't be. You are only a pretty kid of 16."

"Add 10 years to it, Mr. Thatcher. I am Mrs. Warren. I would like a drink of water."

"From the well, please," she added.

They went to the well. She looked into it thoughtfully. Joe grinned.

"Peters said that you were a drunken fellow, who spent half of his time in jail for bootlegging and stealing," she murmured.

"I'll have to sock Peters in the jaw—who and where is he?"

"He's my man-of-all-work about the place. His wife is my cook."

"Oh, yes, there was a Peters family here when I was a kid, and there's a Thatcher family down valley, a bad lot. Guess Peters is something of a fool, jumping at conclusions."

"How embarrassing—and I was rude, Mr. Thatcher."

"Damned rude, Mrs. Warren, and stingy."

"Your well—my well—your well robs me of water in my well, I mean—"

Mrs. Warren was rattled.

"Well! Well!" Joe said, and laughed at her.

"Oh, send your husband up and we'll fix it up for you," he told her. He had lost his rancor, now that he understood.

"My husband was killed in an accident right after we were married, five years ago. Why not come to dinner tonight and discuss it with me?"

Joe did.

He had a great many dinners with her all the autumn, and after that they had dinner together every night as newlyweds should.

Wise Selection Made In Nomination of Erk

The Republican committeemen and women of the Thirty-second Congressional District have made a commendable choice in nominating Edmund E. Erk for the House of Representatives to succeed the late Stephen G. Porter.

Mr. Erk is admirably equipped for the place. He was born in the district and has spent most of his 58 years there, so he is familiar with its needs and desires. For 20 years he was Congressman Porter's secretary and confidential adviser, and so is prepared to proceed without interruption with the things for which Mr. Porter was working when death called him.

Mr. Erk knows Congress and Congress knows him. He has the confidence and praise of the national leaders.

The Thirty-second District is to be congratulated on the prospect of being well represented. Indeed, the nomination of Mr. Erk is cause for satisfaction to the whole city. Just imagine how it would have reflected against Pittsburgh if the district had sent to Washington a man of the same type as some of our leading politicians.

New Postoffice Plan Is Under Criticism

Thanks are due Congressman Clyde Kelly for his prompt and vigorous action on complaints from Pittsburghers about delays in delivery of mails—delays attributed to the new system of centralized mail sorting. As an example of the way in which the system works it is said a letter mailed in Bellevue and addressed to someone in Bellevue would be brought to Pittsburgh for sorting, then sent back to Bellevue.

Congressman Kelly talks plainly about the matter. He says the system was introduced by postal inspectors from Washington, unfamiliar with conditions in Pittsburgh and other cities in which the change was made, who desired to make a reputation for themselves by effecting drastic economies but who did not give proper regard to the necessity of maintaining prompt and efficient service.

Congressman Kelly has made himself such an authority on postal matters that whatever he says on the subject deserves and receives the most respectful consideration. It is gratifying therefore to learn that he intends to lay the whole matter before the House Postoffice Committee.

"Heart's Content" Sure To Be Preserved Now

When Gifford Pinchot was Governor of Pennsylvania he caused certain attractive tracts of primitive woodland in the state forests to be set aside as "forest mopuments" and thus assured of preservation. The primary purpose of the state forests is to furnish a timber supply, but it was felt that the "forest monuments" would serve the public better as perpetual reminders of the beauty and grandeur of Penn's primeval woods.

Pennsylvania's commissioner of forestry in Pinchot's cabinet was Maj. R. Y. Stuart, who has since become chief of the United States Forest Service, a position which Pinchot himself held under President Roosevelt.

The announcement is now made that Maj. Stuart is applying to the national forests the same policy that was applied to the state forests. Typical areas of virgin forest are to be maintained in perpetuity for their educational, historical and research values.

The announcement should be particularly welcome to nature lovers in Western Pennsylvania because it undoubtedly assures the preservation of "Heart's Content," a superb stand of virgin white pine trees in the Allegheny National Forest. If it were not overshadowed by Cook's Forest, "Heart's Content" would be famous.

Employers Should Strive To Maintain Wage Levels

The State Department of Labor and Industry has just issued a report which shows that in the Pittsburgh district as well as in other parts of Pennsylvania the wages paid laborers in the construction and contracting industry were a few cents lower per hour in August than in July. It is to be hoped that the decline is due to seasonal or casual considerations and does not mark a definite trend.

Economists have been saying a good deal of late about the desirability of maintaining wage levels, but it is important enough to warrant its being said again, especially in view of the report from Harrisburg.

A general reduction of wages, especially the wages of the most numerous class of workers, the laborers, would have a bad effect on industry by seriously impairing the purchasing power of the people. It is to the interest of employers in the long run that good wages be paid.

Pedestrians' Rights Not to Be Forgotten

Edmund H. Reppert, of Uniontown, for many years a judge of the Fourteenth Judicial District, has written to Benjamin G. Eynon, commissioner of motor vehicles, to commend him for calling attention to Supreme Court decisions relating to the rights of pedestrians and the duties of automobile drivers at crossings.

Judge Reppert himself deserves thanks for a suggestion which is receiving Commissioner Eynon's attention. The Judge wrote:

"I have had so many narrow escapes from injury at crossings, and so many drivers are contemptuously defiant of the crossing rights of pedestrians, that I am led to express the hope that a copy of your comment, impressively displayed, will be mailed to each licensed driver in Pennsylvania. I am satisfied that many drivers are not only careless and negligent, but also deplorably ignorant of their duties and responsibilities."

As Commissioner Eynon remarks, the increasing number of persons on foot who are killed or injured by motorists bears witness to many drivers' ignorance of or indifference to the law that PEDESTRIANS HAVE THE RIGHT OF WAY. It would not be a bad plan to notify every operator of the law on this matter, at the time his license is issued, as a reminder of his duty.

THE ORIGIN OF THE EARTH

By Archibald Henderson

In the domain of geology and astrophysics, scientists are nowadays developing new theories and materially modifying if not actually overturning the nebular hypothesis of Kant and Laplace. Chamberlin and Moulton have advanced the planetesimal hypothesis, and Jeans and Jeffreys have put forward a modification of this, under the name of the tidal theory. A new theory, markedly differing from those mentioned, is suggested by Barrell. According to this theory, the chemical character of the igneous rocks, the limited depth of density variations in the crust, the limited amount of salt in the sea, the rotation periods of the moon and planets—all point to the molten condition of the earth at the completion of its growth.

Let us imagine the earth in a primitive state, in course of formation. Large masses of matter would be moving through space with individual orbits, but moving in the same directions. A state of incandescense and liquidity would be likely to result from the sizes of the masses involved.

If in addition the infall of masses was sufficiently rapid to bury the heat of previous infalls before it could be dissipated by conduction to the surface, a general heating and liquefaction of the earth would tend to take place, both from the increased compression of the deeper nucleus and the effect of impact at higher levels.

As stated by Barrell:

A molten state suggests a rapid earth-growth due to an original clustering of the matter whose convergence built up the planet. Larger nuclei hundreds of miles in diameter and smaller ones comparable to the planetoids moved in elliptic and nearly intersecting orbits. Mutual perturbations kept modifying these orbits and providing new chances for collisions, union and growth. Such collisions led to a development of energy of impact sufficient to produce in the growing earth a molten state, at least in the outer portions. The earth kept growing at the same time by sweeping up large quantities of finer material, but a molten state suggests that the greater growth was due to the infall of larger nuclei. Finally, but one outstanding nucleus, the moon, was left beside the earth, and the earth-moon system attained a condition of stability and completed growth.

The theories of cosmical origin have a peculiar fascination, since they are not subject to the powers of mere reason. A vivid imagination is required to enable us to visualize the mighty picture of earth formation.

At the earlier stages, when growth and formation were more rapid, as pictured by Barrell, the molecular and dust-like matter swept up by the earth settled like a never ceasing cloud of volcanic ash. The planetesimals of sand and gravel size were swept up by the earth many millions of times more abundantly than are meteors at the present time. Those meeting the earth with the higher velocities were consumed by impact. Over the hemisphere of night the otherwise invisible atmosphere above the cloud canopy scintillated with incessant flashes of light and trails of luminous dust. Bodies of larger size gave in their dissolution a still more brilliant display and penetrated to greater depths. At long intervals, with titanic rush and roar, a greater projectile, tens or even hundreds of miles in diameter, cleaved through the canopy of cloud, leaving a tumultuous maelstrom behind, drove almost unchecked through the deep and dense atmosphere below, and, with worldwide commotion, was engulfed, with development of fervid heat, within the molten sea.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Funny how we are about love.

We may be, and frequently are, the world's worst flop in every other department of our lives, but just let anyone try and tell us that we aren't one of the Great Lovers of history, and see where they get off! Who coined that phrase—"humble lover?" Whoever did was merely mouthing. For if there's an unhumbler creature on earth than a lover, I want a peek at it through the bars.

A man may be a fool in business, a ruffian in morals, a pig as to personal habits. He may even concede these facts. But when it comes to love, he admits no flaw. He is positive that Dante, Romeo and Valentino have nothing on him. And he expects life-long admiration and gratitude from the object of his affection. If perchance she should fail to share his enthusiasm and show her preference for another, he feels quite justified in shooting her and his rival. For doesn't he "love" her? Then how dare she cool toward him?

Or consider Injured Wives, whose husbands' interests have strayed. Do they ever confess that they themselves are partly to blame for such delinquency? Do they acknowledge that there's something amiss with the quality of their love? Far from it! Invariably they insist that they were Perfect Wives and the Other Woman an Unscrupulous Thief.

Or take a bride. As daughter or employe she may have been the village dud. Commercially her time and efforts were worth about $15 per week. But can you convince her that she isn't worth a million as a missis? Try and do it.

How do we get that way? We get that way because our popular theories about love are cockeyed nonsense. Love is supposed to be something apart from all other human experience—a "divine madness" which places the swineherd on a level with a king.

Have we, ourselves, anything to do with this madness? Is it subject to the regular tests and controls which govern our other conduct? No, indeedy! It descends upon us, radiant and complete. And the seizure is identical with each one of us, regardless of our merits. All lovers, whether they be saps or sages, operate under special, sanctified licenses. And it's sacrilege to doubt the beauty, wisdom and heavenly origin of anyone's love.

Such is the idiotic tradition concerning love. The truth is that heaven has mightly little, if anything, to do with our affections. Love is as earthly as the human source from which it originates. It is beautiful or blah according to what-have-you. It is ecstatic, or just static, according to your individual station. It is as wise, as generous, as loyal, as tender as your individual character. If you're a gift to humanity, then your love will be a gift too. But if you're a pain in the neck, your love will be likewise. Not all love is divine—nor even desirable. SOME PEOPLE SHOULD RECEIVE MEDALS FOR THE WAY THEY LOVE, AND OTHERS SHOULD RECEIVE FROM SIX MONTHS TO LIFE.

So don't act as if you've stepped into the god class, just because you love. Maybe you've done something. And again—MAYBE YOU HAVEN'T!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

At the Close of Day.

In this purple hour
At the close of day,
Flower speaks to flower
And the roses say:
"Fret not for hereafter,
Grasp at care's surcease;
Seek the ways of laughter
And the paths of peace!
"As your life discloses
Changing sun and shade,
Live it like the roses,
Gay and unafraid!
"Close your eyes to sorrow,
Cast your fears away;
Picture no tomorrow
That can wrong today!"

Text For Today

But now ye also put off all these; anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth.—Colossians, iii: 8.

(Today's text is suggested by the Rev. John Ray Ewers, pastor, East End Christian Church.)

"Bugs" Baer Says:

One Foot in the Rough

If a germ bites a golfer that ain't news.

It's cannibalism. The paths of glory lead to the bunker and we thought all golfers were thoroughly innoculated by nature against anything that could happen to human binks.

The latest improvement that has happened to golfers is locker foot. And you don't get it from the contents of the locker.

It's a vegetable germ picked up by bare feet on wet stone floors in the showerbaths. After taking the shower you step on the microbe and he merges.

Then you put on your sox and the microbe has a home for the winter.

The result is a nice set of blisters that are turning our finest golf tournaments into Spanish toe dances.

We picked up a case of it last week. But not very serious, as we got it on a miniature links. All that science knows about it is that it is a vegetable germ that eats meat.

The blister lasts about as long as a two weeks' card. Which is just perfect for visiting diplomats.

The cure is iodine. But that means going into a drugstore. And you know how druggists are since the Eighteenth Amendment sprung a leak.

There isn't one drug clerk in a million who will believe you when you ask for rubbing alcohol.

And when you ask for iodine he wants to know what you are going to use for a chaser.

That's the trouble with all those minor ailments that require witch hazel, turpentine or sweet spirits of rust-proof ipecac. The whole trouble with civilization is that the drug clerk lurks behind the partition and gets first look at you through the knothole in the wood.

There should be a law compeling drug clerks to stand out in the open where you can look back at them. The minute you step into the store you know that there are three guys sizing you up through the peep-hole.

We have seen many an apothecary's diploma, but we never yet have seen one that entitles them to be spies in times of peace.

Anyway, we have locker foot. And those germs had better develop a yearning and a taste for iodine, because they are going to get plenty of it.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

VI—Crossing May Produce New Species.

If the two differed in only 10 gene-pairs, segregation could produce over 1,000 recombinations; if in 15 genes, over 30,000; if in 20, over 1,000,000.

Some of the type of flowers thus produced by recombination were quite different from anything seen in either parent, or indeed within the Snapdragon genus, but resembled other genera of the family Scrophulariaceae.

H. G. Wells

There are cases where crossing certainly does produce new types capable of holding their own in nature. The most striking are found among those plant groups which seem to puzzle the classifiers. Roses, brambles, willows, hawkweeds—those, as any botanical amateur knows, are a terrible tangle of overlapping types.

In every case free crossing between distinct species is the root cause of the diversity and the tangle.

Where animal species crosses are fertile, as in various pheasants and in the natural crosses between two species of the American woodpeckers known as flickers, curious irregularities of pattern often crop up in the recombinations.

Each species has worked out its own delicate balance between the different genes responsible for plumage pattern; when the two are crossed, unbalanced combinations crop up which are very easily upset by modifying factors or by environment.

We may presume that the same sort of thing holds good with the genes responsible for other and more deep seated characters.

Thus in higher animals, which are far more complex regulated bits of mechanism than any plant, after a wide cross, the majority of recombinations are likely to be a little shaky in their adjustments, and therefore of no evolutionary account.

Nevertheless, there is one animal species in which this sort of thing has happened on a minor scale—our own.

The inhabitants of Northern India are almost all brown-skinned and dark-eyed, although many of them have features closely resembling those of fair-haired European people. There is every reason to believe, however, that the invaders who burst into these plains from the North in the middle of the second millennium B. C., were fair-haired and blue-eyed, and that the dark-skinned population they conquered had features not at all of European type.

The fair complexion has gone, the features have been preserved. We know that intense sunlight is harmful unless prevented from penetrating by an absorbent layer of pigment. During the hundred generations or so that have elapsed since the conquest and the resultant intermarriage of the two stocks, the fair-skinned must always have been at a disadvantage compared with the dark-skinned.

But the European types of features were at a premium, as being the hall-mark of the superior race. The genes for fair skin have disappeared, but the new combination of aristocratic features with dark skin has survived.

Almost exactly the same thing appears to have happened in Greece. The Dorian irruption, somewhere about the twelfth century B. C., was of fair northern men; and yet there are scarcely any blue-eyed people in modern Greece. Some of their genes, but not others, have been selected out of existence, and no new types have been created.

To sum up, then, new types, often worthy, in plants at least, to be called species, may spring fully formed from a cross, like Minerva from the head of Jove, without a long process of selection behind them. But though crossing, like isolation, may sometimes increase the variety of evolving life, like isolation again, it seems incapable of producing evolutionary advance. These agents of evolution are only subsidiary.

Mutation remains the great driving force. Even if crossing between distinct types never took place, even if we could eliminate all the effects of isolation, evolution with natural selection at the wheel would still go on so long as animals and plants continued to vary and the conditions of the world about them to change.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Lay late and on an after breakfast walk saw Howard Chandler Christy, and tempted to tell him he was the first person I ever interviewed for a newspaper out in Ohio. But wondered what to do if he replied:, "What of it?"

Home trying to write an essay about humanity's war with its own limitations but a sorry effort and glad when Col. Amon Carter came, chanting, as usual, praise of Ft. Worth, the civic conscious citizen I know. So with my wife to Peggy Hoyt's watching comely mannikins.

To a playhouse and during a tense moment my cane slipped into the orchestra pit with a clatter and so confused I have no notion what the play was about. Nor did I retrieve the stick. Afoot to my chambers, stopping to see Tom Millard, here for a day from Shanghai, on way to Geneva. So to bed.

The briefest stage part on record was taken by an actor portraying an Indian. His first line was a grunted "Ugh!" His second "Ugh! Ugh!" The play lasted one night.

* * *

Taxicabbing through Central Park in the silvery dusk. A scholarly looking driver with horn rim glasses. Two spooners in a clinch on a bench. Jerking a thumb toward them, he observed: "The urge biological!"

* * *

In a recent magazine article I spoke of the enormous growth of Los Angeles and ventured even San Francisco could no longer indulge a disdainful chuckle. Today came a telegram—collect, too—hooting: "San Francisco never laughs at the increase in L. A. population. It laughs only at the population."

* * *

My choice of the S. F.—L. A. rivalry stories, however, is still the one concerning the shake at Santa Barbara when a Los Angeles paper is reputed to have carried a screaming eight column head reading: "Earthquake Hits Santa Barbara, 350 Miles from San Francisco."

* * *

Times are so goshawful along the Rialto an actor says he has hired a play writer to prepare a six-minute talk for his landlord.

* * *

A Park avenue lady whose husband is deaf practices French by talking to her dog. And now the dog understands both languages.

* * *

I once acted as escort of a water spaniel sent by an American to a friend in Paris. The animal was marvellously trained, doing many tricks. Five years later the dog responded only to French, having entirely forgotten English.

* * *

Many have wondered if banners of sandwich men bring customers to shops they exploit. My curiosity is satisfied. A shoe heel was torn off on West Forty-second street. Opportunely a sandwich man shuffled by heralding a quick repair parlor nearby. I hobbled there like a kidney pill ad. for first aid.

Personal nomination for the tastiest soup in town—the minestrone at Moneta's in Mulberry street.

In my unobstructive way I find flashes of enjoyment poking around broken down Penny Arcades along Sixth avenue. But I am utterly unable to enthuse over the bioscope number in one entitled: "A Peep Into Lady Hemmingway's Bath!" There seemed to me not only indifferent direction but the author had small appreciation of an anti-climax. The nuances were nebulous and the puissance pitiable and if that isn't grand talking I don't want a cent.

But I found the shooting top hole, no end, at the target range, however, and knocked over three revolving ducks out of a total of five shots. The machine registering the fist blows was apparently out of order, for my heftiest swing from the ankle only made the dial quiver. I completely ignored an attendant's inane comment: "You got to sock it, buddy!"

Ten letters from as many cities on my desk today ask addresses of people who came here to live. You'd think I met all the trains.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You may be nearing the half-century mark.

You hear about large concerns refusing to employ men over 50.

To you this is the gravest problem which confronts the country.

Often you wonder what you would do if you should lose your job.

Perhaps you have reached the point where you are afraid to exercise initiative and dare not make suggestions to your employers because you fear they might say you are a fault-finding old codger and a back number.

If you would give less time to thinking about your age and more time to the best and the latest methods of keeping up a department like yours, you might be more likely to keep your job.

Don't try to force old ideas into a modern department.

Don't fight against changing your style or your methods.

Try things out and seek the best way with an open mind.

If you are not as able to do your work physically as in the past, you may be able to offset physical labor by thoughtful ways of increasing your output.

Don't think so much about your age.

Try to forget how old you are and make every possible effort to keep up with the present-day procession.
